U. S. Captures Karpis In New Orleans Raid Without Firing a Shot

Killer Put Aboard Plane for St. Paul

Seized With Unidentified Woman and Suspect in Mail Robbery.

By the United Press.

New Orleans, May 1.—Alvin Karpis, the most dreaded and hunted outlaw in the country, was captured without bloodshed today by a squad of Federal agents as he left an apartment house near the business center of the city.

With him were taken Fred Hunter, wanted for a $35,000 mail robbery in Garrettville, Ohio, and an unidentified woman.

Out to avenge the murder of four fellow agents, of which Karpis was suspected, the Federal men struck with such dramatic suddenness that people in the neighborhood thought it was only a minor police case disturbance.

Moving so secretly that city police knew nothing of their movements, but so sure of their prey that they had chartered a special airplane to take Karpis to St. Paul even before they sprung their trap, the Federal men ended the reign of the Nation's No. 1 public enemy as he walked toward his parked automobile.

Under Strong Guard.

The three prisoners were whisked to the postoffice building and kept under strong guard for two hours in the Federal Bureau of Investigation headquarters.

Then Karpis, flanked by eight sturdy Federal agents, all bristling with guns, was taken out to an automobile and started for the airport.

In the escort was J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice. Hoover came here from Washington to direct the capture.

An automobile salesman named Clarence Pucheu was credited in Federal circles tonight with circulating a rumor that gave the agents their first tip.

Pucheu sold Karpis a car two weeks ago and was amazed when paid cash in $100 bills. He is employed by a Plymouth agency here, the story goes, and Karpis went to the salesroom two weeks ago and asked about a new car.

He introduced himself as Edward O'Hara, the name he used since he moved into the apartment house on April 10.

"He would not stand on the salesroom floor, but insisted on our going back into the shop at the rear of the building," the salesman was quoted as saying. "He asked me if the governor on the motor could be removed. A few days later I sold him the car. He paid for it in $100 bills."

Eighteen hours before the raid, Hoover chartered a TWA Douglas airliner to fly Karpis to St. Pal, where he is charged with the kidnaping on June 15, 1933, of William A. Hamm, jr. Although he was wanted for many murders and countless robberies, the Government sought Karpis specifically on the kidnaping charge.

Waiting Since Thursday.

The chartered airplane had been waiting at Shushan Airport since 11 a. m. Thursday, ready for the capture and delivery of its cargo. It was flown here from New York by pilots named Zimmerman and Smith, and its presence was a closely guarded secret. Even the pilots remained inconspicuously in hotel rooms.

Working fast and with a precision that indicated the plans were carefully laid, the agents rushed Karpis to Shushan Airport and roared off in a plane toward St.

Thousands Throng Louisville For Kentucky Derby Today

City in Gala Mood for Annual Classic Expected to Be Witnessed by 60,000 Persons; 19 Horses Entered; Muddy Track Likely.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Churchill Downs, Louisville, Ky., May 1.—Up and down the rock-bound coast of Maine, through the Riviera, on the east bank of Rock Creek, around the mulberry bush and elsewhere this is May Day, but here in the hard-boot country it's Derby eve. Mention the warm south breeze, try to discuss the surrender of Addis Ababa, talk about the coming election, say that Maryland makes better whisky than Kentucky, ask for a match or criticize the Administration and you receive only a blank start. But whisper, ever so softly, "Who do you like?" and you light a fuse.

There isn't a word for it. There isn't a phrase for it. The telegraph companies have gotten rich while the paper boys tried to describe it. People try to explain it. They sing it. But there's something about Louisville, Kentuckians, Derbys and horses that just doesn't fit into words.

You catch the spirit of the thing before the engine gets its rear wheels on the Ohio River Bridge. The clicking of the rails that helped put you to sleep last night turns into a "giddy up, giddy up." The old fellow across the way tells his neighbor, "I remember that 1899 race. I elieve it was a horse named Manuel." The porter sticks the tip in his pocket with the remark, "I'se going to put that on Grand Slam."

Louisville is horsey. Men ask for a horse's neck when they mean beer. Try to get the catsup and the waiter brings horse-radish. If there is a fly in the ointment, 10 to 1 it's a horsefly. Street cars gallop, bellboys canter, taxis breeze and traffic policemen look as if they're left at the post. One has every reason to believe a twist of the hotel shower handle will bring a flood of oats.

From all appearances nobody will hit the hay tonight, for on the morrow the sixty-second Derby will be run.

The 1936 race, discussed from a million angles, written and rewritten and rewritten, hashed and rehashed virtually since Omaha stuck his nose on the imaginary wire a year ago, officially began this morning with the announcement of the entries.

At 7:59 o'clock (the official time

Mother of Two Fatally Beaten; Assailant Flees

Neighbors, Hearing Scream Run to Rescue, but Arrive Too Late.

By the Associated Press.

Chattanooga, Tenn., May 1.—Brutally beaten and kicked during a daylight attack, Mrs. Lula Mae McConnell, pretty wife of a theater manager and the mother of twin baby girls, died today after police said she indicated she may have known her assailant.

Police Commissioner Eugene Bryan said the 23-year old housewife, unconscious most of the day, mumbled an incoherent story just before her death of a visitor to her apartment in a fashionable residential section late yesterday.

"I let him in the front door. He dragged me—said J'd left him—said he'd come for me."

Emphasizing that Mrs. McConnell was in a comatose state, Commissioner Bryan said little credence could be placed in what she mumbled.

Earlier she had whispered, "A white man did it," and "I don't remember."

A physician said the young matron was "stomped horribly and prints of new rubber heels showed distinctly on her abdomen."

Estranged Wife of Radio Man Says $900 Monthly Inadequate

Stating she is unable to support herself and her two children on the $900 a month income she has been receiving from her estranged husband, Francis M. Russell, vice president of the National Boradcasting Co., in charge of the Washington area, Mrs. Helen P. Russell, of 2931 Foxhall road, yesterday petitioned the District Supreme Court to award her maintenance in such amount as the court might think proper.

Through her attorney, Leo Rover, Mrs. Russell declared she and her husband, a leading figure in the radio world, entered into a separation agreement in January, 1934, under which he agreed to turn over his entire salary to her.

A few months later, she alleged, the agreement was modified so that Russell was obliged to pay her $1,025 a month.

The payments were reduced afterwards, Mrs. Russell said, to $900. This left her with her 11-year-old daughter and 5-year-old son, both of whom are in her custody, to support on the decreased amount.

Out of this, her petition declared, she was required to make payments on a home. The reduction was "unreasonable," Mrs. Russell said, and should be set aside in terms of the separation agreement.

The Russells are widely known here. They were married in the Middle West in 1921. Russell, since his separation, has resided at the Wardman Park Hotel. He is a native of Iowa and a graduate of Iowa State College.

Russell is 42, his wife 38.

PWA Relief Fund Barred By Hopkins

WPA Needs All of 1.5 Billion, He Informs House Faction.

By Sidney Olson.

Insisting that the Works Progress Administration will require all of the proposed $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation, WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins yesterday rebuffed efforts of a Congressional Committee seeking to reconcile him to a plan to earmark $400,000,000 of the sum for PWA projects under Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, The Post learned last night.

The Congressional group, composed of Representatives Beiter, New York; Dobbins, Illinois; Lambeth, North Carolina, and Kramer, California, all Democrats, went first to Hopkins' office and later to that of Ickes yesterday in an effort to adjust long-standing differences.

Hopkins, it was learned, stated that he had no objection to the award of $400,000,000 to the Interior Department for PWA projects, as long as it didn't come out of the $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation proposed by the President. He insisted that the WPA would require all of this sum to maintain its operations.

At Ickes' office, the Secretary, who would not comment for publication, outlined to the representatives the possibilties in a $400,000,000 grant to the PWA for substantial projects. This sum would constitute 45 per cent of the cost of a new PWA program, with the remaining $400,000,000 to $500,000,000 contributed by communities.

Representatives Differ.

Representative Beiter said that this would enable each Federal million to put as many men to work on PWA projects as on the light construction jobs of WPA. According to Beiter, Hopkins agreed that if engineering estimates supported this contention, he would agree to a reduction in his own agency's estimates. Other committee members did not take quite this view, as Representative Lambeth pointed out that Hopkins said the matter was not for his decision, but for that of the President.

It thus appeared that the whole matter was once again headed for a Presidential decision, such as that made by President Roosevelt last September at Hyde Park, when a severe slash was given PWA's share of the present $4,000,000,000 work-relief fund on the grounds that big PWA allotments were inadvisable because of the high cost of materials.

Beiter said he would have figures ready for the President at a conference early next week which would meet this objection. Thus far WPA projects are providing about three-fourths of all work relief jobs, as they cost much less per man employed.

Prefer PWA Projects.

The communities supply only 18 per cent of the expenditure, however, and the four Democratic Representatives have contended, as have numerous others, that communities prefer the more substantial PWA projects to the minor "leaf-raking" activities of WPA.

A joint conference between Ickes and Hopkins, with the Congressional committee present, had been planned for yesterday, but somehow fell through. The committee then went to the two chiefs separately.

At his press conference, President Roosevelt was asked if he had sent Beiter, after the latter's visit to the White House the day before, to arrange for the Hopkins-Ickes get-together. The President smilingly professed ignorance of the entire matter.

When a reporter pointed out that Representative Beiter had attempted to arrange the conference almost immediately after his chat with the President, Mr. Roosevelt merely smiled again and dismissed the question. Congressmen on Capitol Hill, however, asserted that it was their definite understanding the President had asked for the Hopkins-Ickes-Congressional group meeting in the hope that the matter could be adjusted "lower down the line" and without necessity for executive decision.

Settlement by the President, however, seemed the most likely possibility last night, according to informal sources.

'Eviction Holiday' Of 30 Days Urged

St. Louis, May 1 (AP).—Mayor Bernard Dickmann today asked property owners not to evict penniless tenants for a period of 30 days.

The mayor, who issued the appeal after a meeting of a committee appointed by him, and representatives of the city's unemployed, explained that within a month a full investigation of the relief rolls probably would be completed.

As the city's chief executive spoke, a May Day parade of several hundred men, women and children wound through the business district. The parade leaders were from the two score persons who yesterday ended a 48-hour siege of the City Hall demanding additional aid for the jobless. The parade was peaceful.

The "siege" of the City Hall began Tuesday, when the board of aldermen adjourned until May 11 without taking action on the unemployed group's demand for an increase in the city's monthly relief appropriation from $147,000 to $500,000.

Vandenberg Asks G. O. P. Nomination

Michigan Senator Invites Gov. Fitzgerald to Make Speech.

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

Lansing, Mich., May 1.—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, tacitly declared his candidacy for the Republican Presidential nomination tonight when he asked Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald to sponsor his cause at the Cleveland national convention.

Vandenberg's long silence concerning his Presidential aspirations was broken with announcement by Fitzgerald that he had accepted the junior Michigan Senator's invitation to nominate Vandenberg in an address before the convention.

Vadenberg's letter of invitation to the Michigan Governor, revealed by Howard C. Lawrence, chairman of the Republican State central committee, made no specific requests regarding the nature of the nomination address. This, observers believe, was for the purpose of allowing Fitzgerald the greatest latitude in his remarks.

Soft-Pedals His Candidacy.

The Senator, however, soft pedaled the general belief that he is an active candidate for the Republican nomination when he advised the Governor that his letter was prompted solely by the fact that the Michigan delegation of 38 was instructed to nominate him.

At last week's Republican State convention, Vandenberg was indorsed by the party and its delegates turned over to him without, however, any binding regulations.

Fitzgerald, acknowledged leader of the party in Michigan, is slated to become chairman of the State delegation. Thus he is in an excellent spot to appeal for Vandenberg support at Cleveland.

But even with the delegation pledged to Vandenberg and its leader ready to promote his cause, no effort will be made to bind it to a unit vote in the event that Vandenberg withdraws as a candidate.

"Such procedure is contrary to the spirit of Michigan Republicanism," Lawrence said in disclosing the Senatorial invitation. "If our informal pledge to Senator Vandenberg is broken at any time during the convention, the individual delegate will be at liberty to cast his vote for the remaining candidates."

Party Leaders Jubilant.

Party leaders were jubilant over Vandenberg's action, particularly since he has not before committed himself. Even to political intimates he has said during recent months that he would not seek the nomination.

They nurse the hope that their junior Senator will wind up the convention with the nomination in his hands. There is strong feeling that a convention deadlock is in the offing and that Vandenberg is the man to break it.

Vandenberg's invitation was construed in some quarters as a severe blow to the convention hopes of former Gov. Wilber M. Brucker, a candidate for the post of Senator James Couzens.

Brucker, successful in obtaining a seat in the Michigan delegation despite strong opposition, was believed preparing himself for the task of introducing Vandenberg to the national convention, a move that would have entrenched him politically.

Moses Says Col. Knox Has 169 Pledged

George H. Moses, former Senator from New Hampshire, said in a statement yesterday, "I know" that Col. Frank Knox "has 169 delegates who have been elected to the Cleveland convention for no purpose other than to vote for the Illinois candidate."

"There is a striking note of inconsistency among the claims which are advanced in behalf of candidates other than Col. Knox," Moses said. "In Massachusetts, under a 'write-in' statute belatedly invoked for the purpose, less than 10 per cent of the enrolled Republicans of the State cast a preferential vote for one candidate.

"Upon this slender base the friends of that candidate (Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas) claim the entire State, although with two exceptions the membership of the whole delegation from Massachusetts is unpledged and each delegate knows that the vote was only advisory even as it is also illusory, and the 'advice' thus given has about the same validity as a resolution of indorsement passed by a high school debating society in a small town.

"If the reasoning which is being applied to Massachusetts possesses real force, it necessarily follows that Borah is entitled to all the delegates from Pennsylvania and Knox is entitled to all the delegates from Illinois.

"In other words, the control of the Cleveland convention and the nomination which that convention uninstructed delegates who will go will make lie in the hands of the there. It is within this group that I find the 169 delegates who I know are for Knox."

Go Home, Tax Hearing Told By 'Country Boy,' N. Y. Expert

Two Unite in Advising Senators to Adjourn or Revise Bill.

By Robert C. Albright.

A Virginia "country boy" who made good in business and a certified public accountant who was "shocked" at tax bill complexity yesterday pleaded with the Senate Finance Committee either to adjourn Congress and go home or write an entirely new tax bill.

"I will be so glad when you fellows adjourn," drawled E. H. Lane, of Altavista, Va., soft-spoken, ruddy-faced furniture manufacturer, who said he was hard pressed watching Washington and his business at the same time.

"I'm just a country boy trying to make an honest living, and I know very little about taxes," said Lane, "but if you fellows could just get off our backs for a little while, business would improve a lot faster."

"You mean you would like us to adjourn without passing this tax bill?" said Senator Hugo L. Black, of Alabama.

Leaders Plan To Sidetrack Lesser Bills

Only New Deal Measures to Be Pushed in Drive to End Session.

Faced with a forced House vote May 11 on the $3,000,000,000 inflationary Frazier-Lemke bill, leaders moved yesterday to confine the rest of the session to Administration measures, and to sidetrack some of the lesser of these if they interfere with the drive toward adjournment.

Forced to a House showdown by 218 signatures on a "discharge" petition, House leaders indicated they would make no effort to evade a vote on the inflationary farm mortgage refinancing bill, but indicated other measures unwanted by the Administration stand little chance of a vote.

Efforts were directed at expediting action on the two major barriers to adjournment—the tax bill passed by the House, and the $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation still in the House Appropriations Committee. When these are disposed of, Congress will adjourn, regardless of the status of other measures.

Among bills reputed to have Administration approval that may be sidetracked in the final adjournment rush were the pending ship subsidy and pure food bills.

Both Speaker Byrns and Senate Majority Leader Robinson reiterated forecasts of adjournment early in June.

Although the forced vote on the Frazier-Lemke bill was an upset to Administration legislative planning, leaders contend they have little to fear from the measure. They believe it can be defeated in the House, but even should it not be, they pointed out, it still must run the Senate gauntlet, and a probable veto.

It was Majority Leader William B. Bankhead who advised expansionists that the House Democratic leadership would resort to no strategic maneuvers to prevent a vote on the farm mortgage inflation bill.

Under the rules, seven legislative days must elapse before the bill can be considered on the "second Monday" in May. By recessing one or two days a week, the vote could be forced over until a later day.

This was pointed out by Representative Gardner R. Withrow (Progressive), Wisconsin, who had demanded a call of the House for a quorum, saying he did so because he feared the House would be recessed to avoid a vote on the inflationary measure.

Bankhead hastened to assure him that the leadership would employ no recesses, or any other parliamentary strategies, to block consideration of the bill.

D. C. Revealed As Unhealthful For Children

Highest Death Rate From All Causes Shown in Report.

By Gerald G. Gross.

Striking an ominous note in the May Day child health celebration here, official statistics of the United States Public Health Service were produced yesterday showing the District to be a distinctly unhealthful place for children.

Obtained by The Post in advance of publication, the report submits mortality data for 26 States, the District of Columbia and Hawaii for the calendar year 1935.

Insofar as Washington, which is critically handicapped by lack of adequate appropriations for public-health activities, is concerned, the high lights of the study are as follows:

The diphtheria death rate was 5.6 per 100,000 population, compared to an average of 2.3 for all 26 States. In 1934 the death rate from this cause was 3 per 100,000 in the District. Only Tennessee had a higher rate than Washington last year.

Deaths of children under 1-year dropped from 64 in 1934 to 59 per 100,000 in 1935, but the 1935 average for 24 States with available data was only 52.

Infantile paralysis caused two deaths per 100,000 last year, an increase from 0.6 in 1934. The total for all States in the study was 0.8. Washington was tied with North Carolina for the dubious honor as runner-up to Rhode Island.

Meningitis, which, like infantile paralysis, attacks adults and children alike, saw the District emerge on top without competition. The death rate was 18.8, compared to an average of 2, which represented an 1,800 per cent increase over the previous year's toll here.

Deaths of children under the age of 2 from diarrhea and enteritis fell from 14.3 to 11.8 but remained well above the average, which was 7.6 in 1935.

Washington stands out ignominiously in practically every phase of the report, which is wholly impartial. The Nation's Capital, in 1935, is shown to have the highest death rate from all causes (17 per 1,000 population) and to have made the greatest gain in maternal mortality. The latter jumped from 3.6 per 1,000 in 1934 to 6.1 last year.

Its top ranking in tuberculosis deaths was safely protected, the rate for 1935 being 121.6 per 100,000 population, compared to a 26-State average of 52.5.

The Capital also won first place

Washington Airports Unsafe, Amelia Earhart Tells Senate

Amelia Earhart, trim air conqueror of both the Atlantic and the Pacific, told a Senate Commerce sub-committee here yesterday that Washington airport facilities are "deplorable."

"Washington is far behind other cities in the matter of good landing fields," she said. "I think it is a shame that the Capital of this great country should maintain air fields that are actually hazardous to fliers."

Miss Earhart appeared before the committee at its request to give her views on air safety and landing aids, which the committee is investigating. She was obviously nervous as she took her seat before the long table in the Senate caucus room. She was dressed in dark blue, hatless, and her hair was towseled. Her white collar was starched stiff and prim.

Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York, and chairman of the committee, escorted her, and set her at ease by saying, "Miss Earhart, we want to find out all we can in answer to the question of air safety."

"I want to make it clear that I represent no organization," she replied, "and that I come here merely as an individual pilot."

She then vigorously defended Federal airways personnel, whom she declared were "on trial" before the sub-committee as a result of charges of inefficiency.

"I believe the reputations of these

Largest Amount For Peace-Time

Conditional Approval Is Given $51,000,000 Fighting Craft.

By the Associated Press.

The biggest peace-time naval supply bill ever put forward—carrying $534,068,707 in new funds and conditional authorization for the construction of two new super-battleships — yesterday was passed by the House after the members crushed down by a 212 to 73 vote a move to strike out the capital ship clause.

The measure was propelled into an apparently favorable Senate only a few hours after President Roosevelt indicated at his press conference that he might send to that branch shortly the new London Naval Treaty. He did not commit himself definitely, nor did Senate leaders hold forth any guarantee of ratification at this session.

To the surprise of the House leadership, one of the noisest floor fights in two sessions of record Army and Navy supply bills developed under the generalship of Representative Marcantonio (Republican), New York, who centered his attack on the battleship authorizations with a cry that "we are aiming for an imperialistic war."

Farm Backing.

Despite backing by Midwestern farm members, he lost successive attempts to strike out the battleship authorization on a point of order, as an amendment, and by recommitting the bill to the Appropriations Committee with instructions to remove it—this on a roll-call vote.

The bill then was approved without a record vote.

The battleship clause, saying the two ships can be started, to cost $51,000,000 each, if some other treaty power starts building similar vessels was written into the legislation as at least a partial result of the recently signed treaty between the United States, Great Britain and France.

The treaty, if ratified, places no prohibition upon laying down new capital ships between 17,500 and 35,000 tons. If not ratified, there is no ban on ships in any category.

Great Britain on Thursday disclosed plans for building 38 new warships, including two battleships of the maximum 35,000-ton class. The authorization in the naval bill would enable the United States to match them by building two similar vessels estimated to cost $51,000,000 each. They would be intended to replace the Arkansas, Texas or New York.

Ratification Doubtful.

Whether the treaty would be ratified this session was problematical, even if the Chief Executive decides to send it to the Senate. Some saw little prospect of approval this late in the session, with Congress pressing for early June adjournment and two major measures, taxes and relief, yet to be disposed of.

Marcantonio, leading the attack on the battleship authorization, complained, as did some others, that it was written in without hearings, or other justification or notice. Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, of the Naval Committee, replied that further hearings were unnecessary because of facts developed previously. He said the step was taken "because we were forced to include them by the action of other nations."

The big supply measure for the 1937 fiscal year sped through the House without change after only two days' consideration.

The bill also provides for 18 other new vessels and 333 new airplanes, and boosts the Navy enlisted strength to near-treaty limits.

Including carry-over funds from previous appropriations and special grants, and a $13,000,000 contract authorization for airplanes, the measure will round out a total of approximately $601,000,000 for the Navy in the 12 months beginning July 1.

Vinson, in the debate, pleaded against leaving this country to "the pity and charity of other nations," and asserted that "we stood idly by for ten years (after 1922) not building a ship and hoping other nations would observe disarmament." But, he said, they went ahead building.

He added that "it is incumbent upon us at all times to maintain the

The President Praises C. of C. Census on Jobs

Sibley, Pleased, Says Study May Be Started by Next Week.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt and Harper Sibley, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, swapped compliments yesterday on their attitudes toward a national survey of new job possibilities in private industry.

Replying to a question at his press conference, the President said he was delighted over the re-employment survey resolution adopted by the chamber's twenty-fourth annual meeting this week.

When told of Mr. Roosevelt's comment, Sibley said:

"The President's commendation of the chamber's proposed survey of re-employment possibilities will be pleasing to business. After all, the problem is one of concern to all alike—Government, business and labor.

To Proceed Immediately.

"The chamber will proceed immediately to organize the study as authorized by its board of directors. I hope to be able to announce next week the make-up of the committee which will have the task in hand. We already have received offers of co-operation from organizations which can be of great help in an effort of this kind."

The exchange of pleasantries excited a hum of speculative comment at the chamber's national headquarters, which a short time before had echoed the Administration's challenge to business to absorb the idle or pay increased taxes for relief, with a retort that industrial re-employment has been handicapped by the tax and other governmental burdens.

One official said privately yesterday, following the exchange of pleasantries, that the Government would determine the exact number of employable persons out of work, and business would make a rigid count of jobs that could be created.

To Talk With O'Leary.

Secretary Roper was reported authoritatively to be considering a call upon the business advisory council for the Department of Commerce to suggest to the Census Bureau a comprehensive plan by which the Government might make the most nearly accurate unemployment survey.

Sibley was expected to confer on May 3 with John W. O'Leary, president of the Machinery and Allied Products Institute, who suggested the re-employment resolution to the chamber's board of directors.

O'Leary, it was said, likely would be named chairman of the special committee authorized by the board to conduct the cross-country count of employers able to hire more workmen.

He told the directors that a positive approach to solution of the unemployment question was knowledge of the specific prices where employment has declined and where it can be increased.

Once employers started thinking whether or not they could provide more jobs, he said, the process would induce constant and ever widening awareness of re-employment possibilities.

"Need Broad Survey."

"What we need," he explained, "is a broad national survey. Business and industry, through Chambers of Commerce, trade associations and individual merchants, stores, services and professions throughout the country can determine our re-employment possibilities with a degree of accuracy which cannot be equaled in any other way.

"We should proceed to piece together the many threads of information, and then make available to all a concentrated, exhaustive knowledge of re-employment possibilities."

Sibley indicated the membership of the committee would represent a geographical and industrial cross-section of the country.

The re-employment problem, he said, could not be localized or solved by one formula and the answer rests in action to meet widely different conditions.

4 School Players Die in Truck Crash

Swansboro, N. C., May 1 (U.P.).—Four high school baseball players were killed and eight others injured late today when the truck they were riding in crashed into a heavily log-laden truck on a dusty dirt road near here.

The dead, all from Swansboro, are David Ward, 18, driver; Edward Canaday, 18; Oscar Crumpler, 17, and Howell Jones, 18.

Carlton Hatsell, 17, was in a Moorehead City hospital, not expected to live. The other seven suffered minor injuries.

Riverside, Calif., May 1 (AP).—Mrs. Molly Tackaberry McAdoo sued William Gibbs McAdoo, jr., son of the United States Senator, for divorce today.

She charged he had failed to provide for her and their two children for the past year. Her lawyer said papers would be sent today by airmail to the younger McAdoo in New York.

The couple married in New York City May 22, 1922, and separated September 18, 1934, the complaint said.

By Franklyn Waltman

ASIDE from the ineptness of the Republican high-command, the most remarkable and interesting aspect of the current political campaign is the self-assurance, the confidence—one might say the insouciance—of President Roosevelt and his New Deal legions.

WALTMAN

So certain is the President that he will be re-elected that he clearly has no intention of making any concessions to the right-wingers in his party. Actually he is pursuing a course of conspicuously ignoring them, as illustrated by his recent Baltimore speech, when he did not even mention the name of the late Albert C. Ritchie, by his New York address, when he did not even look in the direction of the Al Smith Democrats.

Jim Farley, casting aside the scowl of last January—which made him a disagreeable person—now smilingly and nonchalantly claims an even greater electoral vote for Roosevelt this year than he received in 1932—and grudgingly concedes but three States to the Republican nominee. Lesser Democratic figures echo and reflect everywhere this optimism and confidence of their leaders.

Seldom has a President or his friends believed he was so sure of re-election as apparently Roosevelt does. In 1924, when the Democratic Party was hopelessly split, the usually calm Calvin Coolidge and his managers were disturbed lest the Robert M. La Follette third-party ticket might give victory to the Democrats. Four years later Herbert Hoover was so jittery about the outcome of his race that he was persuaded to make the fatal promise to call a special Congressional session to deal with the farm situation.

There is at this time good reason for this Democratic optimism. One need not be a political expert to realize the hard fight facing the Republicans. Newspaper polls everywhere testify to the popularity of Roosevelt. Observers who have made extensive surveys doubt whether the Republicans can take even New York away from Roosevelt. Looking into the Republican camp, one is impressed by the demoralization, disorganization and the blundering going on there.

But it is a safe bet that Republican confidence has now reached its lowest ebb in the campaign. For several reasons it should improve from now on and, before many weeks pass, the Democratic leaders may conclude that they have been too cocky for their own good. Overconfidence has lost many a battle, and while it may not lose this one, the reaction may be demoralizing to the Democratic shock troops.

* * *

One reason for the blundering of the Republican organization, which has created the defeatist attitude now found in that group, has been the lack of leadership. Most of the Republican Party today is out of sympathy with Herbert Hoover, its titular leader. Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican National Committee, has tried hard, but he is not a practical politician. A man of great talents in other fields, of high character and industrious, Mr. Fletcher understands neither the political game nor public pyschology. And he must be ever mindful of the warring factions in the party.

Other leaders in the party have become aligned with factions in the struggle over the Presidential nomination—and thus they cannot draw the party together. In addition, without leaders to guide them, the Republicans on Capitol Hill have laid down on their job as the minority opposition, content in some instances to bolster their chances for re-election by not opposing New Deal generosity to their States and constituents.

* * *

But a change will come the day the Republicans at Cleveland unite on a platform and a Presidential candidate. The latter's voice will call the floundering rank and file into line. He will set the direction of the opposition—and, with a standard bearer at their head and a definite goal before them, the Republicans will take new heart and commence fighting.

Roosevelt so far is running against nobody, and it is an axiom of politics that "somebody always can beat nobody." But what will happen when the Republicans name their candidate? We have an illustration in the case of Kansas, where the Republicans are for their Governor, Alf M. Landon, for the Presidency. In that State, at least, the situation for several months has been Roosevelt versus Landon.

Now what has happened? In the America Speaks Poll of President Roosevelt's popularity published on December 22, 1935, Kansans were recorded as 53 per cent for President Roosevelt and the State thus was safely Democratic. In the poll published on January 19 the Kansas figure was 52 per cent. A month later it was 51 per cent. In the poll published March 15 it was 50 per cent. In the latest poll taken, published April 12, it was 49 per cent, and Kansas, in four months, had changed in that poll from a safely Democratic State to a "borderline Republican" State. The only apparent factor accounting for the change was the increasing prominence of the Landon candidacy.

* * *

Election day is six months away, and what has happened in Kansas may easily happen throughout the country, to a more or less extent, once the opposition is consolidated behind one man. Much can happen in six months to change the political picture. Continued downward movements in the stock market would react against Roosevelt, whose chief reliance, after all, is his claim that he was instrumental in restoring prosperity. Large crops this year, with lower farm prices in the fall, likewise would chill some of the rural enthusiasm for the New Deal. And the country might yet be convinced that any prosperity leaving 10,000,000 workers still unemployed is without substance.

1 Missing, 5 Hurt In Oklahoma Gale

Elk City, Okla., May 1 (AP).—Water famine threatened this western Oklahoma community of 7,000 tonight after torrential rains and a wind storm caused one drowning, injured five persons and inflicted damage estimated in the thousands of dollars.

Collapse of a $350,000 dam at the city reservoir sent a flood pouring over a farming community south of here and deprived the city of drinking water. Seven emergency water wells were chocked with mud.

Tired searchers slushing along the muddy banks of a nearby creek recovered the body of George Bates, 40, Chicago engineer whose automobile was swept into a flood-swollen stream while three youths looked on helplessly.

H. C. Cotton, his wife and three children were treated for injuries received when the wind smashed their five-room farm house southwest of here. The wind tore away part of a cotton compress plant and blew the roof off a school.

U.S. Pushes Tax Evasion Charge Against Mellon

The Federal Government yesterday pushed its case against Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury under three Presidents, who is charged with underpaying his income tax in 1931.

At the same time, Frank J. Hogan, Mellon's attorney, contended in a statement that the Pittsburgh millionaire is being made the victim of partisan politics.

Hearings on the charge that Mellon failed to pay an honest income tax in 1931 have been going on in Pittsburgh and here for more than a year.

Yesterday attorneys for both the Government and for Mellon filed briefs with the United States Board of Tax Appeals, which is expected to hear oral arguments in the case, beginning June 8.

United States Seeks $3,075,103.

The Government seeks to collect $2,050,069 in back taxes from Mellon, plus a 50 per cent fraud penalty—a total of $3,075,103.

The Government attorneys, in their brief, accused Mellon of "fraudulent evasion" of his proper income tax payment in 1931. Mellon claimed a loss on the sale of 123,662 shares of Pittsburgh Coal Co. stock to the Union Trust Co., a Mellon concern, for $500,000. The Government argued that this was not a real sale and that 118 days later the stock was repurchased for $517,278 by the Coalesced Co., Mellon's family holding concern.

Hogan, striking back at charges, which he said had been made by "the Roosevelt Administration," denied that Mellon had underpaid his income tax for 1931.

"Mr. Mellon asserts," said Hogan's statement, "that when he paid $647,559.36 for 1931, he actually overpaid his income taxes by $139,045.17. He now demands that the Government refund that amount."

Charges Expediency.

"The only explanation to be made for the present Administration's action in the case of Mr. Mellon, his counsel suggest, is the fact that no consideration, other than political expediency, was ever given to it.

"In support of this, they point out that during the trial, over strenuous objection, they forced the disclosure that the Treasury Department's file copy of the letter sent Mr. Mellon March 29, 1934, demanding additional taxes, had stamped across its face, 'Case has not been considered on its merits.'"

Charity Trust Assailed.

One of the briefs filed by Hogan and other Mellon lawyers is devoted to the attack made on the A. W. Mellon Educational and Charitable Trust. Through this trust, the former Secretary of the Treasury and Ambassador to the Court of St. James is presenting to the city of Washington a world-famous art collection, and also a handsome gallery to hold it.

The Mellon lawyers quote the ruling of the Treasury Department, made in 1933, recognizing that the trust was a tax-empt organization under the law.

This ruling, they point out, stood until near the end of the trial of the tax case last April, when a deputy commissioner was sent from Washington to Pittsburgh to deliver a letter revoking it. The Mellon attorneys charge this revocation was ordered solely because Mellon was on trial.

Borah-Landon Contest Seen in South Dakota

Sioux Falls, S. Dak., May 1 (AP).—A direct contest between Gov. Alf Landon, of Kansas, and Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, in the South Dakota Republican primary next Tuesday became apparent today with announcement that one set of eight candidates appearing on the ballot as "expressing no preference" was definitely in favor of Landon.

Announcement was made by Ralph O. Hillgren, secretary of the Landon Club, that seven of these candidates signed pledges to support Landon "as long as his nomination appears possible," and the eighth was "100 per cent in favor of Landon."

Another slate of delegates headed by United States Senator Peter Norbeck also was on the primary ballot officially pledged to Senator Borah. No other Republican Presidential aspirants have entered the primary.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 1.—Senator Gerald P. Nye charged today that America's "so-called national defense plans are calling for the transportation of millions of American boys across oceans again to defend the lands of other nations than our own."

The North Dakota Senator, chairman of the United States Senate Munitions Investigation Committee, addressed a May Day meeting on Boston Common. He declared for a "neutrality policy that will prevent our commercial appetite drawing us into the wars of others," and urged removing the possibility of making profits from wars.

Senator Nye was the guest of a meeting conducted by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

On another section of the Common, the Communist Party conducted its annual observance of International Labor Day.

Nye said: "No nation has as little fear of attack as ours, yet we are spending more in the name of national defense than any other nation on earth. The trouble lies in the fact that our so-called national defense plans are calling for the transportation of millions of American boys across oceans again to defend the lands of other nations than our own.

"Fears of war and preparation for war are too much inspired by those who profit both from war and preparation for it.

"It is the patriotic duty of Americans to prepare for peace as well as to prepare for war. If we could give this service we should write a neutrality policy that will prevent our commercial appetite drawing us into the wars of others; we should destroy the prospect of profit from war by writing tax laws that will prevent profit being won by anyone while our country is at war, and we should destroy the motive of profit in games of preparing for war even though it be necessary for the Government to go into the business of producing largely its own requirements of national defense machinery."

Utterback Girl Kidnaped Self, She Confesses

Father Casts Doubt on Statement, Orders Reporters Away.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Loudoun County's "kidnaping" was solved yesterday.

But details remained a mystery.

Commonwealth Attorney Charles F. Harrison announced the denouement at a hurriedly arranged press conference in his Leesburg office. Summoning reporters by long-distance telephone (newsmen earlier had left town, amused and bewildered), Harrison handed them typewritten copies of a statement allegedly signed by Hilda. The statement read:

"Acting on an impulse, I and I alone kidnaped myself. I will not take time to recite details, but I deeply regret my foolish act. I hope I may be forgiven for my error.

"HILDA UTTERBACK."

However, in spite of the signed confession and Harrison's further announcement that the case was closed as far as his office is concerned, Hilda's parents refused to accept the sudden climax.

Father Routs Reporters.

When reporters sought to question Utterback after the press conference he first said Hilda had collapsed and could not be seen and then invited his visitors—in no uncertain terms—to leave the property.

"My daughter didn't know what she was doing when she signed that paper," he insisted.

Harrison obtained the hoax admission when he went to the Utterback home in the morning. The confession was witnessed by S. P. Alexander, a deputy sheriff.

Harrison's announcement of the "solution" was dramatic. Seated at his desk and surrounded by Sheriff E. S. Adrian, deputies and county officials, he began:

"This crime, which has been discussed and written about in all papers of the East, is at an end."

At this point he cleared his throat and handed out the statements.

"I am aware that the people of the county have been deeply concerned," Harrison continued. "There has been some harsh criticism of county officials for their handling of this case. That criticism, in my opinion, has no justification whatever. This statement of Hilda's removes every element of doubt from the situation. The case is closed and I feel we are vindicated."

Maintaining his policy of the past five days—uncommunicative answers to all questions—Harrison refused to enlarge on the confession and urged that "everything be dropped."

At the Utterback farm, reporters were met in the front yard by Hilda's father and mother.

"It is a terrible thing," said Utterback. "My daughter is unconscious. She collapsed and we had to send for the doctor. She was in no condition to sign anything."

He intimated that "kidnaping experience" had upset Hilda both mentally and physically, leaving her irresponsible. Both Utterback and his wife refused to believe their daughter was not kidnaped, bound and left alone in the vacant tenant house.

When asked, however, to explain certain angles of the "crime," he became angered and politely but firmly ordered reporters to leave.

Was Normal Earlier.

Dr. W. C. Barr, jr., of Ashburn, Va., who was called to the Utterback home soon after Harrison left with the signed statement, said Hilda was in a state of nervous collapse. He said the collapse "may have been caused by the confession and again may be a result of her ordeal."

Dr. Barr said he was told that Hilda was "perfectly normal" earlier in the day.

Utterback, however, said he felt his daughter's mind had been upset by the "kidnaping" shock.

And thus ended Loudoun County's "most baffling crime." During early morning hours last Sunday, Hilda, her hands and throat bound with flimsy cord, was found in a dark and deserted farm house a few yards from her home. She was not gagged—yet she did not make any outcry while a posse circled her hiding place. Her feet were not bound but she made no attempt to break down a flimsy door through which her "rescuers" reached her. Two men later were arrested and subsequently released. The case, for a time, t eatened Loudoun County with a political upheaval.

Roads Unit Blamed In Eckloff Deaths

The deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Eckloff, Washington residents killed in an automobile crash on the Baltimore boulevard April 18, were due to negligence of the Maryland Roads Commission, a coroner's jury at Jessups, Md., charged Thursday night.

In its report the jury held that the accident was caused "by the State roads commission failing to take the necessary precautions in regard to the safety of the traffic at the State roads weighing scale near Waterloo, Howard County."

The car collided with a truck which was attempting to get into the south-bound traffic lane after having driven part way on the scale. The driver of the car, Joseph Marks, and dthe driver of the truck, William Morris, both were exonerated by the jury. Both are of Washington.

It was learned that road officials consider that the verdict was "contrary to the evidence" and that they intend to discuss the case with a representative of the attorney general's office.

Highlights in Arch Gangster's Attempts to Evade the Law

Alvin Karpis, who, until his capture in New Orleans last night, was known as Public Enemy No. 1, is shown when his criminal career first came to the attention of authorities upon his commitment to the Kansas Reformatory at the age of 16, on a burglary charge. Top, officers at Munroe, Mich., examining machine abandoned by Karpis and Harry Campbell, after they used it in their flight from Atlantic City, where they shot their way to freedom when trapped by local officers in hotel room. Karpis Made 'Name' for Self After Parole by Kindly Judge

Desperado, Released in 1931 in Oklahoma, Rejoined Barker Family in Trail of Crime; Committed Murder Within a Month.

Like many another modern desperado, Alvin Karpis made a "name" for himself after being paroled. His most spectacular crimes—the murder of a sheriff, two major kidnapings and a long list of bank robberies—were committed in a period when, had not a kindly judge interfered, Karpis would have been in a penitentiary.

Perhaps the judge was thinking about Karpis' youth; perhaps he could not believe that the tall, pathetically thin young man with the blue eyes and the pale face was as bad as the Oklahoma police made him out to be. At any rate, the judge did not think Karpis ought to serve four years to which a jury in his own court had sentenced him, and so he placed him on parole.

That was in the fall of 1931. A month later Karpis had committed a murder and was well started on the riotous career that was to make him Public Enemy No. 1 in a country where there was plenty of competition.

Karpis, whose real name was Raymond Karpavicz, was born August 10, 1909, in Montreal, Canada, of Lithuanian parents. The family moved to the United States when he was a small boy.

First Arrested at 16.

He was first arrested in Topeka, Kans., when he was 16. The charge was stealing automobile tires. For that offense he was committed to the State industrial reformatory at Hutchinson for 10 years. There he met Lawrence Devol, and the two became fast friends. Three years after Karpis entered the institution, he and Devol—also known as Larry Barton—sawed through their cell bars and escaped.

They were arrested a year or so later in Kansas City. In their automobile was a safe-blowing kit. Karpis was sent back to the reformatory, but when knives were found on him he was shifted to the Kansas State Penitentiary.

He was released May 31, 1931.

While in the penitentiary, Karpis met Freddie Barker, one of the several criminal sons of "Ma" Kate Barker, herself a specialist in robbery, kidnaping and murder. Now Karpis headed for Tulsa, Okla., where "Ma" had her headquarters.

Arrested in Tulsa.

Ultimately he was to become so powerful that the organization became known as the Barker-Karpis gang. Had it not been for the aforementioned judge, however, Karpis and the Barkers would have parted company for good two weeks after Karpis' arrival in Tulsa.

On June 10, 1931, Karpis was arrested in Tulsa and taken to Okmulgee, Okla., where he was wanted on a burglary charge. At that time he was using the name of George Hailer.

He was sentenced to four years in the State Penitentiary in McAlester, Okla. But he never went there. After serving three months in the county jail, the judge who had presided at his trial paroled him.

He rejoined "Ma" Barker and her sons—Freddie, Arthur, also known as "Doc," and Herman and Lloyd. Other notorious criminals with whom he associated included Frank Nash and Verne Miller, the renegade sheriff who killed a Federal agent in the Kansas City "massacre" that followed an attempt to rescue Nash.

Karpis' underworld cronies called him "Old Creepy" because he got on their nerves. He was never very popular with the men, although "Ma" Barker, who knew a good bank robber when she saw one, liked and admired him.

On December 19, 1931, not long after he had been paroled, Karpis killed Sheriff C. R. Kelly, of West Plains, Mo. He had walked into a garage to question them about a robbery the night before. Actually they had not taken part in the robbery, but rather than face a judge again Karpis gave Kelly "the blast."

Now Karpis and the Barkers moved into the Northwest to execute an amazing series of bank robberies. "Ma" Barker picked the banks and arranged for the getaway. Police have estimated that the gang got away with a half-million dollars and killed at least five persons.

Biggest Haul $50,000.

Their biggest haul was $50,000, carried away from the National Bank & Trust Co., in Sioux Falls, S. Dak. This, together with sums of $20,000 and $30,000 which they netted from periodical holdups, amounted to important money. But the Karpis-Barker gang was ambitious.

Early in the summer of 1933 the gang decided to espouse the kidnaping racket, and marked as the first victim William A. Hamm, jr., wealthy St. Paul brewer. Hamm was seized as he left his office for luncheon on June 15, 1933, and was taken to a farmhouse at Bensenville, Ill. On the night of June 17, his family paid the $100,000 ransom, and Hamm was released near Wyoming, Minn.

Arthur (Doc) Barker and Fred Barker, together with six other criminals, helped Karpis on this job, which had been planned by "Ma" Barker.

Not long afterwards, Karpis, "Ma" Barker and her boys were in the kitchen of their St. Paul home when they heard the police were on their way. "Ma" suspected that somebody had "squealed" about their part in the Hamm kidnaping. Her suspicion fell on her second husband, Arthur W. Dunlap. It was decided that he must die. His stepson, Freddie, and Karpis invited Dunlap to take an automobile ride. A few days later, Dunlap's body, riddled with bullets, was found near a small town in Wisconsin.

Encouraged by Success.

The Hamm kidnaping, which had brought the gang $100,000 so easily, encouraged Karpis and "Ma" Barker to seize another wealthy citizen of St. Paul. This time they were determined to double the ransom sum.

Their victim was Edward George Bremer, scion of another well-known family of St. Paul brewers and president of the Commercial State Bank. He was kidnaped on the morning of January 17, 1934, immediately after he had driven his daughter to school.

Bremer, too, was taken to Bensenville, Ill. He was held there until February 7, when the $200,000 ransom was paid by his family.

The kidnapers had used flashlights in signaling to members of the Bremer family at the place where the pay-off occurred. They made the mistake of leaving these flashlights at the scene. Federal agents found them and traced them to a store in St. Paul, the owner of which identified Alvin Karpis as the purchaser.

Proved Undoing of Gang.

That kidnaping was to prove the undoing of the Karpis-Barker gang.

Karpis, the one-time petty thief, was now mentioned along with John Dillinger, "Baby Face" Nelson and the Nation's other first-rank mobsters. In the language of the underworld, he was "hot" and he had to keep moving.

"Ma" Barker and her son, Freddie, went into hiding on a chicken farm in Florida. Karpis, with his girl friend, Dolores Delaney, and Harry Campbell and his girl visited the Barkers there, and then took over a place of their own farther south.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation was tipped off to the whereabouts of the Barkers, and there followed one of the most spectacular gun battles in the Nation's history of crime.

A small army of Federal men was thrown around the Barker home. The agent in charge, risking his life, walked boldly up to the door and asked "Ma" and her son to surrender.

Issued Order to Shoot.

"To hell with you all," said "Ma." Then, calling upstairs to Fred, she cried: "Let the damn Feds have it. Shoot!"

Young Barker blazed away with a machine gun. A moment later his mother joined him and trained another machine gun on the agents. They, meantime, were loosing a veritable hail of lead at the house.

Tear gas also was turned on the house, but Ma and her son continued to fire. At length a burst of rifle fire tore through the house and caught Ma. She dropped beside her machine gun. Fred caved in a few minutes later. He had 14 bullets in his body.

Karpis and Campbell heard about the raid, and, with their women, started North. They traveled in a stolen car; otherwise, they might have been spared a lot of trouble.

Auto Is Found.

Florida police broadcast the number of the car. Atlantic City police found it in a garage, and on orders of the Florida authorities set out to arrest the men who were driving it. They did not know, of course, when they went to the small hotel for the two men that they were Karpis and Campbell.

Consequently, they were ill-prepared for the battle that followed. Karpis drove them back with a machine gun, and he and Campbell made their way out of the hotel, stole another machine and made their escape. They left their women behind them, and one of them, Karpis' companion, shortly thereafter went to a maternity ward.

What finally brought about his capture apparently was the $5,000 reward recently offered by Attorney General Homer Cummings. This was posted April 22. A few days later the Postoffice Department offered another $2,000.

Confident of Arrest.

Whether this money was posted as part of a bargain with the informer may never be known. At any rate, the Federal Bureau of Investigation was confident for several days that Karpis was "in the bag."

J. Edgar Hoover was in New York three nights ago. He left there for New Orleans, traveling presumably by plane, and yesterday led the raid in which Karpis was seized.

Incidentally, it was Hoover's first arrest. He directed the war against the underworld that brought down such criminal celebrities as John Dillinger, "Pretty Boy" Floyd and "Baby Face" Nelson, but never until yesterday had he actually arrested a man. Asked by a Senate appropriations committee recently whether he had ever made an arrest, Hoover explained that it was not until a year ago that he and his men were authorized to make arrests.

Hoover took more than a professional interest in Karpis. Last summer he received a message from Karpis threatening his life.

Harry Campbell, Karpis' radio singer companion, does not now become public enemy No. 1, Department of Justice officials explained last night.

There are two men whom Hoover's men would much rather arrest. They are William Mahan, sought as the remaining principal in the Weyerhauser kidnaping, and Thomas R. Robinson, jr., who kidnaped Mrs. Berry V. Stoll, of Louisville, Ky., and held her for $50,000.

Arthur (Doc) Barker would be high in the listing if he were at large, but he is now serving a life sentence at Alcatraz for his part in the Bremer kidnaping.

Karpis Caught In New Orleans Without a Shot

Paul at 9:30 p. m. (Eastern standard time).

Neighborhood accounts of the capture were vague. The best version was that the Federal men, armed with sawed-off shotguns, arrived in front of the apartment house just as Karpis, Hunter and the woman left the porch and started for their automobile at the curbing.

The officers leaped forward, seized both men by the arms, and dragged them to their automobiles. About 20 agents were in the raiding party.

Reports that a trail of blood later was found leading from the apartment house to the street, and that a man was seen running, stopped, apparently wounded in the side, remained unverified.

Beyond a formal, terse announcement that the Hamm kidnaping suspect and Hunter were taken, Hoover declined to comment.

Woman's Name Withheld.

Name of the woman prisoner was withheld. She was about 22 and attractive.

Karpis was said to have been in New Orleans "some time." Hunter had been hiding here several months, attracted South for spring training of big league baseball. He was described as a "baseball bug."

As the plane bearing Karpis to St. Paul took off from Shushan Airport, bystanders caught only a glimpse of the prisoner.

He was dragged from a Government automobile to the plane. He was chained hand and foot.

Hunter and the woman were kept behind locked doors of the Federal Bureau of Investigation office long after Karpis was taken away.

Newspapermen and photographers swarmed in the corridor. Once, Hunter was taken outside to a washroom. His feet and hands were shackled.

He stumbled amid a clatter of chains, and a burly Federal agent picked him up in his arms and carried him.

Pace Is Swift.

The transfer of Karpis from the Federal office to the airport kept the same swift pace of earlier events.

Hoover, squat, nattily dressed in a brown suit, a nervous and brusque general in the Nation's war on crime, stepped from the office and strode down the corridor.

"He never had a chance," Hoover mumbled.

"Did he offer any resistance?" someone called.

"How long had he been in New Orleans?"

"Several months."

"Did he have a gun?"

"Not with him. He had one in the car outside."

Karpis was in their midst. He was in shirt sleeves and wore a straw hat. He was smooth-faced and in the available glimpse he closely resembled his pictures in Rogue's Gallery. Obviously he had affected no disguise to avoid the dragnet that had been closing about him since he succeeded "Baby Face" Nelson on the murderer's throne in 1934.

Placed in Long Red Car.

On the postoffice building steps, Hoover stood giving directions about the cars. He pointed out a long red one. It was filled quickly by Karpis and his guards.

Each Federal agent carried a traveling bag and several had ominous-looking cases, obviously sheathing sub-machine guns.

Hoover looked around for a second car. None was there. He looked annoyed, but only for a moment. Another large car whipped up to the curbing. Hoover leaped in and the two automobiles started down the street, the red one setting a furious pace and disregarding traffic lights.

At the airport, guards held spectators at a distance 100 yards from the plane. Karpis was half dragged to the ship, popped into the cabin and the plane was away and roaring into the north in an instant.

Karpis Now Linked To Train Holdup

Cleveland, May 1 (U.P.).—Alvin Karpis was named by the Federal Government three days ago as leader of the machine-gun gang that held up a mail train at Garrettsville, Ohio, last November 7.

Among those named with him were Fred Hunter, captured with Karpis tonight in New Orleans, and John Brock, who is held here charged with participating in the robbery.

Europe Marks Quiet May Day In Armed Peace

Russia Stages Vast War Display; Austria Calls Conscripts Oct. 1.

By the United Press.

Paris, May 1.—Dictators and political leaders of Europe today talked peace in terms of armed might while their nations celebrated a comparatively quiet May Day.

At Moscow, the Russian bear showed his claws to the world in the form of one of the greatest military and aerial displays in history.

Chancellor Adolf Hitler, addressing the youth of the German nation over the radio from Berlin, demanded firmness and strength to insure the sovereignty of the Nazi state.

Austrian Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, over a nation-wide hook-up from Vienna, announced that the first contingent of conscripts for Austria's reborn military machine will be called to the colors on October 1.

Paris was peaceful with only a few scattered demonstrations, but military activity at the Maginot line of fortifications on the French side of the Rhineland continued feverishly.

Rome Awaits Triumph.

Rome ignored the day as a holiday, waiting expectantly for word from her armies in East Africa that Emperor Haile Selassie's kingdom has fallen.

At Warsaw, several German Nationalist students were injured, one gravely, when they clashed with Socialists during a Socialist procession. At Lodz, Poland, Socialists smashed the windows and furniture in the editorial offices of a Nationalist newspaper.

"Red Shirts" shot and killed a Fascist, Eduardo Frnaco, at Sevilla, Spain. Numerous demonstrations were held throughout Spain, but the day generally was quiet.

The Russian military display was held before Lenin's tomb, under the ancient battlements of the Kremlin. Joseph Stalin, dictator of Russia, and other Soviet officials stood at attention while thousands after thousands of khaki-clad soldiers, squadrons of tanks, motorized artillery, anti-aircraft batteries and armored cars passed.

At the same time, hundreds of planes, ranging from tiny pursuit ships to the world's largest bombers, droned overhead.

The comintern issued a manifesto urging the workers not to rely on the doctrines of pacifism or imperialistic countries but "only on the uncrushable unity of the working class for maintenance of peace."

Meanwhile, Chancellor Hitler appealed to the German people for unity and strength. Speaking to 50,000 youths at Post stadium, Der Fuehrer said:

"We demand idealism of youth and that you be ready to make sacrifices. We demand a hard youth and one that will not capitulate before hardness. We are proud that our youths are hard. Today, previously a day of strife, we see German men and women marching in unity. I am proud that what we created will live on in you."

Later, speaking at the Lustgarten, Der Fuehrer said, "our rule is not based on bayonets, but springs from the people's love."

Seek to Be Left Alone.

"Because we have set ourselves to mighty tasks, we want to preserve peace which is necessary to their fulfillment," he said. "Some petty politicians in other countries may not understand this, but we have only one wish—to be left alone.

"I need not win respect through some glorious act claiming millions of dead. I need not lead millions to the slaughter so that other men may believe in me."

Two million jammed the Lustgarten and lined the route to hear and see Der Fuehrer.

He was cheered wildly when he said, "We have never stretched out our hands to take other people's possessions. We have never threatened others. A few weeks ago we made a great offer through which peace and security could be achieved. Yet at this moment we see others conducting a slander campaign. They put forth lies that we want to attack Austria or Czechoslovakia. I ask who are those who do not wish peace but wish constant disturbance?

"We know the small band of international profiteers from war. We knew them in Germany. They are always the same."

In London 5,000 radicals, Independents, Laborites, Communists and trade unionists held an anti-war demonstration at Hyde Park. Three hundred police were assigned to preserve order.

Mexico City, May 1 (AP).—Labor staged its fiftieth May Day celebration in a mammoth parade before the palace of President Lazaro Cardenas today.

Their ranks augmented by students, children and members of civic organizations, platoons of the Confederation of Workers of Mexico marched in review before Barba Gonzales, sceretary of the interior.

The celebration was without disorder, although long lines of police armed with rifles stood watchfully along the parade route.

Dr. Kittredge Holds Last Harvard Class

Cambridge, Mass., May 1 (AP).—Dr. George Lyman Kittredge, internationally known authority on Shakespeare, who has become almost a tradition with Harvard men, delivered his last lecture as a member of the Harvard faculty today.

Although Dr. Kittredge does not retire officially until September, today's lecture was the last in his course on Shakespeare, after 48 years at Harvard.

Spry, despite his 76 years, "Kitty" as he affectionately is known to students, swung into the lecture hall attired in his usual light gray suit, light blue tie and tan shoes.

"Kitty" walked to the platform and, without looking, shouted a needless "quiet."

When he had finished the students roared their applause, and for two minutes "Kitty" stood silently, with bowed head, on the platform. Then he marched away.

Addis Ababa Being Evacuated as Italian Troops Draw Closer

Occupants of the Ethiopian capital are reported fleeing to the hills as Il Duce's soldiers continue their slow trek over mine-torn roads leading to Addis Ababa, ancient capital of Haile Selassie's crumbling empire.

Selassie Hurls New Defiance; Won't Give Up

Says He Will Set Up New Capital, Reorganize and Fight Again.

Copyright, 1936, by United Press.

Addis Ababa, May 1.—Emperor Haile Selassie today hurled new defiance at Italy, refusing to sue for peace or treat with Italian representatives although Marshal Pietro Badoglio's troops were ringing his capital with men and steel.

"The war is not over yet by any means," he said at his palace after reviewing 5,000 of the imperial bodyguard.

Although no longer the debonair little man who left for the northern front six months ago, the Negus Negusti was still full of fight. He stills wears his field marshal's uniform, but his face is drawn and haggard. His beard is streaked with gray. His hands are bandaged allegedly because of gas burns.

With a confused, terror-stricken populace in his own capital looking to him for advice, the Emperor, after a feverish round of conferences with his ministers, said:

"We are quitting the capital, but that is not significant. We will establish a new seat of government and from it we will be in communication with the outside world.

"Ethiopia is not suing for peace. I will never enter into direct negotiations with the Italians. Our only negotiations will be through the League of Nations.

"I will never surrender Ethiopia. I will never leave the country of my own free will. I will never surrender, even if the worst comes to pass; never, never.

"We shall reorganize and fight again. The war is not over by a long way," he said.

While the Emperor talked with the foreign press, many of his troops, supplied with new arms and large quantities of ammunition, took up positions in the hills fringing Addis Ababa. It was believed that some resistance would be given the Italian forces, new reported only 30 miles from the capital. The resistance was expected to be more in the nature of another gesture of defiance rather than representative of hope the Italian occupation can be postponed.

Toscanini to Leav U. S. With 'Regret'

New York, May 1 (AP).—Arturo Toscanini, who conducted his farewell concert in the United States Wednesday night, issued a statement tonight on the eve of his sailing for France.

"The time has come for me to go, but I leave with deep regret," he said. "I shall never forget, as man or as conductor, any smallest detail of my life and work in America."

He was the principal conductor of the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Society orchestra for the last 11 seasons.

"I should like this message to be taken as a personal good-by," he said.

It was disclosed that President Roosevelt had sent Toscanini a note of regret at closing his American career and concluding "I wish you godspeed as you leave our shores."

"I shall never forget with what kindness and true understanding I have been received by the American people. I leave with sadness in my heart, but with memories to enrich the years to come," his answer to the President said in part.

Suspect in Slaying Not Called to Stand

Greenville, Tex., May 1 (AP).—The defense closed its case today without calling Mrs. Velma Patterson to testify in her trial for allegedly poisoning her daughter, Dorothy McCasland, 12.

Attorneys of the thrice-wed woman concentrated on efforts to show her maternal love was so great she could not have slain the little girl. She also is charged with poisoning another daughter.

The jury will be charged and arguments begin tomorrow.

Snakes 'Capture' Express Car As Worker Seals Door, Flees

Son of Zoo Keeper Rounds up Loose Reptiles When Train Reaches Cincinnati and They Are Speeded on to Detroit Home.

Cincinnati, May 1 (AP).—A May-day gift of hissing snakes came to the Queen City today, but express company officials and loaders, handling the matter without gloves, rounded up the reptiles quickly and put them on a Detroit-bound train.

Things started to happen down in Albany, Ga., where an express car worker on the Louisville & Nashville Flamingo noticed a snake crawling around loose. Knowing there were five boxes of live undescribed snakes marked "Fragile, this side up," in the car, he skittered out and sealed the car door.

Joe Stephan, son of Sol Stephan, Cincinnati's zoo keeper, met the train.

The express car was loaded with shipments of tropical fruit, ferns, Spanish moss, a barrel of live frogs and a child's tricycle, all packed in open boxes in which snakes at large could hide easily.

Also in the car, though listed on no waybill, was a cloud of mosquitoes.

Between smacks at the insects, loaders took every crate and hamper out without finding a snake. Then, as officials and police cleared the car of everyone except themselves and Joe Stephan, a hissing sound came from the steam pipes.

"There," said Stephan.

He prodded with a hooked stick through the wire netting protecting the pipes. Soon he had a strapping 7-foot gopher snake—non-poisonous. He popped the hissing reptile into a gunny sack.

The same procedure captured two more hissing 7-footers, a coach whip and a pine snake—both also non-poisonous.

"I think that's all," said Stephan.

With the situation under control, express workers expedited transfers of the snake shipment to a Detroit train to take it to the zoo there.

Burch Vance, express company official, said "we'll have to ship back all the stuff that was addressed to points between here and Albany, Ga. We couldn't deliver any of it because the car was sealed."

Quintuplets to Become Sirens, Old Maids, Psychologist Says

Hamilton, N. Y., May 1.—Dr. Donald A. Laird, director of the Colgate University psychological laboratory, expressed belief today the Dionne quintuplets stand a good chance of growing into heart-breakers—and old maids.

Their segregation from other children while very young may make them man-haters, he said.

"Those guardians are going to have their hands full as the 'quints' grow up," the psychologist said. "The small fortune which each will have accumulated will, of course, be a good marriage lure to selfish, fortune-hunting young men.

"But the girls are likely to be heart-breakers in their own right. They were born prematurely, and it is a general rule for those born while very small to be better looking—the typical doll-faced persons.

To Break Hearts.

"The quints are likely to be particularly good-looking young women who will leave a lot of broken hearts in their trail.

"The marriage chances of the quints, however, already may be diminishing since they are surrounded too completely by women. Unless men come into girls' lives while they are still very young, they are predisposed to become old maids, even man-haters.

"It would be a good plan to disinfect a few of the little boys around Callander and let the quints learn to play with them. If they don't start playing with boys soon, and if they do not go to school with boys, the chances of their being honest-to-goodness heart-breakers are increased enormously."

Expert Scouts Theory, Praises Babies' Care

Toronto, May 1 (AP).—The Dionne quintuplets are growing as healthy, normal children and there is no foundation for the idea that they will become man-haters, Dr. Alan Brown, Toronto child specialist, said today.

He was commenting on the suggestion of Dr. Donald A. Laird, Colgate University psychologist, that segregation of the quints from other children would tend to turn them away from the opposite sex eventually.

The provincial government," said Dr. Brown, "is quite capable of taking care of the quints without the advice or assistance of anyone else, and it is doing admirable work under the direction of Dr. A. R. Dafoe."

Enrollment in CCC Extended to May 15

By the Associated Press.

Extension until May 15 of the date for enrollment in the Civilian Conservation Corps to meet a "real shortage" in camp personnel was announced yesterday by Robert Fechner, CCC director, after a conference with President Roosevelt.

He said CCC youths were getting other jobs at the rate of 12,000 a month and enrollments to date had been insufficient to replace them.

Aids reported 20,000 to 25,000 additional enrollees were needed, mostly from the larger cities, to bring the corps up to its authorized strength of 350,000.

Fechner said the shortage in enrollments existed in all nine corps areas, but that it was the greatest in the third area, comprising Pennsylvania, Maryland and the District of Columbia.

Gregory Assumes Duties As Labor Unit Solicitor

Charles O. Gregory, former associate professor of law at the University of Chicago, was sworn in yesterday as solicitor of the United States Department of Labor. He succeeds Charles E. Wyzanski, now in the Solicitor General's office of the Department of Justice.

Gregory was born in Derby, Conn., and educated at Yale. For a time he was associated with the New York law firm of Root, Clark, Buckner & Ballantine. He then taught law at the University of Wisconsin, going from there to the University of Chicago.

Women Urged to Unite In Press Freedom Fight

New York, May 1 (AP).—Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, tonight called on members of the Women's National Republican Club to join the fight to preserve freedom of the press.

"So far the press has fought almost alone to preserve our liberties," he said in an address before the club. "Your presence here shows that we will fight alone no longer.

"You will enter the battle and lead millions to save your country from the fate that is engulfing the rest of the civilized world."

Fascists Mark War Triumph, Delayed Again

Shops Closed, Flags Raised, But Blasting of Roads Checks Advance.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, May 1.—While unexpected difficulties retarded an Italian army's descent upon Addis Ababa, pentup Fascist eagerness to celebrate the war's climax tonight burst its bounds.

Premature demonstrations and a widespread display of the national colors in many cities gave the nation its own version of America's first Armistice Day celebration in 1918, based on erroneous news.

The conviction that a dramatic climax of the war had arrived was particularly widespread in northern Italy. In Turin, Milan and Genoa shops were closed, flags were raised from every staff and spontaneous celebrations were conducted by crowds gathered in the streets.

Authoritative sources strove to check the advance celebration, suggesting it might be "seven or eight days" before Marshal Pietro Badoglio's columns enter the capital of Emperor Haile Selassie.

Unexpected Obstacles.

Meanwhile, in Ethiopia Badoglio's men encountered unexpected obstacles as they sweated and strained to produce the occasion the home population anticipated.

As a motorized column approached Addis Ababa its progress was retarded by great holes blasted in the road by retreating Ethiopians. Trees had been felled across the way and great avalanches of stone and dirt blasted from bordering mountains added to the difficulties.

Engineering detachments called up to clear the road labored night and day, while eager troops fretted and fumed at the realization their advance was behind schedule.

All official sources in Rome, anxious that popular ardor should not become cooled by premature excitement, attempted to belittle the expectation that the fall of the Ethiopian capital is imminent.

Throughout Italy several secretaries of the Fascist Party received instructions to hasten to Rome tonight, it was believed to receive instructions concerning the organization of a victory "adunata," or mass mobilization, when the call finally should be issued.

Seven Months' Battle.

Tomorrow marks the seventh month from the first national mass meeting, October 2, on the night which Italy started its invasion of Ethiopia. It is regarded as a likely choice for a second national mass meeting, or "adunata."

A communique from the front asserted that the southern Ethiopian army, under Ras Nasibu, was "in flight" after the Fascists occupied Daggah Bur. The town is 150 miles southeast of Harar and 25 miles from Sasa Baneh, captured by the Italians after a 16-day fight.

"The enemy lost more than 5,000 men," said the communique. "Our losses * * * were 50 officers dead or wounded and 1,800 troops dead or wounded."

Workers Unite For First Time In N.Y. May Day

Communists, Socialists and Trade Unionists Join in Orderly Parade.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 1.—United for the first time, New York's Communists, Left Wing Socialists and trade unionists joined in a march to Union Square today to celebrate labor's international holiday under a warm spring sun.

The only clash was a difference of opinion between the parade committee and the police department on the number of marchers.

Deputy Chief Inspector Edward A. Bracken estimated there were 40,000 in the parade.

Amicus Most, secretary of the united May Day committee, said there were at least 200,000 in line.

Red Dominant Color.

Red—sweaters, berets and banners—was the predominant color and the "Internationale" was one of the favorite tunes. Their horseshoe route included, for the first time in years, a seven-block stretch of lower Fifth avenue.

The police department posted 1,400 men along the line of march.

Thousands of spectators, on sidewalks and in office buildings, watched the passage of placards and floats lampooning Hitler, Fascism, Wall Street and the Liberty League.

Socialists at Polo Grounds.

Old Guard Socialists and trade unionists gathered in the Polo Grounds, far uptown, for a program of speeches, songs and athletic events. Between 40,000 and 50,000 persons filled the ball park by police estimate.

In a broadcast tonight, Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, said May Day was celebrated "by those who would enslave the workers to the state."

The celebration, he declared, was "a sad and tragic demonstration" of the fact that "the people in other countries who have been offered security in place of liberty have ended up by losing both."

Navy Yard Bids On Liner Top Private Offers

Leviathan Substitute Cost Estimates Submitted by Norfolk, N.Y. Plants.

By the Associated Press.

The Navy estimated yesterday it would cost $17,170,000 to replace the Leviathan in one navy yard, and $18,250,456 in another, as compared with a private yard estimate of $13,346,000, with an alternative of $14,010,000.

The Navy "estimates" were submitted to Secretary Roper in response to his resquest for navy yard "firm bids" a month ago, when he said the estimate and alternate submitted by the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. were "entirely unsatisfactory."

The higher estimate was for construction of the ship for the United States Lines in the New York Navy Yard, and the lower Navy estimate was for its construction in the Norfolk Navy Yard.

Inquiries whether the basis for all the estimates was the same went unanswered. Col. J. M. Johnson, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, said "we did not attempt an analysis when the Navy submitted its estimates, but referred them immediately to the United States Lines."

The Shipping Board Bureau allowed the United States lines to withdraw the Leviathan from service more than a year ago under an agreement that the big ship would be replaced by a new liner of the Manhattan-Washington type.

The Newport News Company was the only yard to submit an estimate when bids on the ship were asked. The Department of Commerce which, through the Shipping Board Bureau, may lend up to 75 per cent of the construction cost of the ship, said on April 2 that it did not regard the Virginia Yard's estimate as a bid, and asked the Navy for a "firm bid."

Under the Navy's estimates the New York Yard would require 36 months to build the ship and construction in the Norfolk Yard would require 34 months.

224 Get Pay Boosts.

Baltimore, May 1 (AP).—The State roads commission announced today it had granted salary increases to 244 of its 425 employes in an attempt to standardize and equalize the salaries.

Hull Indicates France and U.S. May Soon Conclude Trade Pact

By the Associated Press.

Announcing that negotiations for a Franco-American reciprocal trade agreement were in their final stages, Secretary Hull yesterday voiced hope that other world powers would join the United States in efforts to revive international commerce.

His statement was made at a press conference attended by a group from the Foreign Press Correspondents Association of New York.

Hull's reference to the proposed pact with France—which has been the subject of conversations between the two governments for more than a year—lent strength to a belief that it would be signed within a few days.

Makes No Direct Reply.

His allusion to world commerce in general was prompted by the inquiry of a Japanese correspondent who asked if there was prospect for the negotiation of a reciprocal treaty between the United States and Japan.

Without making direct reply, Secretary Hull said:

"The United States and Japan are equally interested in the rehabilitation of the trade and general economic situation throughout the world.

"We are hoping that Japan, Great Britain, France, Germany—and all the important countries alike—may soon see their way clear to proceed simultaneously, but in their own manner, in support of this same program which contains the fundamentals of what we know as economic liberalism, that is, a sane practical middle course between extreme economic nationalism on one hand and extreme internationalism on the other.

"Nations are now all bogged down in the muck and mire of extreme economic nationalism and the world is in a network of discriminations; and that means retaliations, embargoes, quotas and other restrictions on commerce.

Trade "Flat on Its Back."

"The result is that the whole international trade structure has been undermined, is practically flat on its back, $20,000,000,000 to $30,000,000,000 of mutually profitable international trade have been destroyed for the time being—choked out of existence—and 12,000,000 or 14,000,000 wage earners have been thrown out of employment.

"Naturally, we are hoping that each country, in the same broad spirit we are seeking to follow, will exert its influence and adjust its economic planning in this wider direction, not only combining a suitable domestic program with a suitable international economic program, but exerting itself in many ways that are available to manifest to other countries the necessity of early steps in the direction of economic rehabilitation.

"I hope and have no doubt that Japan will respond to these sentiments which I have just expressed."

Plane Factory Ban Is Favored By Navy Heads

Government-Owned Plant Proved Impractical, House Is Told.

The recommendation of the House Naval Sub-Committee on Appropriations that the "yardstick" airplane manufacturing features of the Naval Aircraft Factory at Philadelphia be eliminated, will not meet with the opposition of the Navy Department, it was indicated yesterday.

In reporting out the half-million-dollar naval appropriations bill on Thursday the sub-committee rejected outright the Navy's request for funds for the building of 100 airplane engines, restricting the expenditure of the sums to be appropriated solely for the construction of experimental and training planes and experimental engines.

Pointing to the higher production costs in the Philadelphia factory, partly because of the need of paying private companies royalties and the inexperience and limited production of the Government, the sub-committee advised that "the Navy should not go beyond the manufacture of primary training airplanes—the simplest type—and should not engage in airplane engine manufacture at all."

Citing the 10 per cent limitation on the profit of commercial aircraft manufacturers in the Vinson-Trammel naval authorization act of 1934 as sufficient safeguard not to require a "yardstick," the sub-committee further advised that the Government "would save money if it would go out of the airplane manufacturing business altogether."

Manufacture of airplanes at the Philadelphia factory was begun late in 1934 following the passage of the Vinson-Trammell bill, one provision of which ordered the Navy to build 10 per cent of its planes in Government factories. The purpose of the provision was to set up a "yardstick" by which the profits of munition makers could be measured.

With the aid of a PWA grant of $2,708,000 the airplane factory, which since the war had been used solely for experimental work and to overhaul airplanes, was renovated and equipped to turn out 60-odd planes a year. Navy officials who in general preferred private to Government manufacture of airplanes took the easiest way out under the law by concentrating their production on primary, comparatively simple training ships.

A sample plane already has been produced and found qualified in tests at Pensacola and the release of the first of the 85 training units now under construction is expected soon.

The request of the Navy for appropriations to build its own engines, which seemed the next step under the terms of the Vinson-Trammell act, roused the sub-committee, as Navy officials, in their testimony before the sub-committee as revealed in the hearings published Thursday, admitted that private manufacturers would turn out more efficient machines and engines at a lower cost.

Hearing Extracts.

Representative McLeod—Is it a fact that as these plans progress, the cost of the airplanes manufactured in the aircraft factory will cost in excess of what they could be purchased for from private industry?

Rear Admiral King (chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics)—I think likely.

McLeod—Therefore, there is no economy to be effected and there is no real use of a yardstick by which to gage the cost of airplane construction?

King—We do not know what costs are involved in Federal manufacture that are not involved in commercial manufacture. Apparently the majority in Congress wanted to see a yardstick provided, and we are getting one.

King—I cannot in the immediate future.

Pointing out that "the Navy has not engaged in building airplane engines," the sub-committee concluded that "considering royalty cost, inexperience and limited production the chances are that the Government will pay more for the engines than if it purchased them."

"To engage in the construction of other than training types of airplanes," it declared, "would necessitate installation of further equipment and to build an engine of its own design would require the provision of considerable machine tool equipment. The cost of the more complicated and expensive types of planes would be all out of proportion to the cost of planes commercially produced, because of the limited number that could be reproduced."

At the Navy Department, the general reaction to the committee's recommendations was that elimination of "yardstick" aircraft manufacture would free Navy officials of "a headache."

ratio of 5—5—3," and told Marcantonio "the gentlemen from New York seeks to destroy our treaty Navy."

"This Government went as far as any Government in history ever had to bring about disarmament," the chairman said.

Representative Boileau (Progressive), Wisconsin, jumped into the debate with the charge that while members of the Army, Navy and Appropriations committees were honorable men, the three groups were stacked with men "with the idea that the best national defense is the biggest Army and Navy we can get—an ultra 100 per cent big Army and Navy." He added this was being done when "millions are crying for bread."

A Farmer Laborite, Representative Lundeen, of Minnesota, who voted against entering the World War, said there were members "who think we have got to save the world—be the policeman of the earth."

"I'm getting tired of that sort of thing," he concluded, after arguing that building the battleships would entail providing another $100,000,000 in auxiliary craft and airplanes.

The big bill went through unaltered, however, despite a half dozen other attempts to amend it.

Amelia Earhart Lauds Bureau of Air Commerce

Senator Copeland, chairman of Senate Commerce Committee, listens as Amelia Earhart, first woman to fly Atlantic alone, tells Senate Air Safety Committee there was "no group more loyal, interested and conscientious" than the Bureau of Air Commerce.

men are being injured by indirection and innuendo, and that the public has been misled as to the real effectiveness of landing aids. I have just completed a lecture tour, and some of the questions that have been asked me show that a definite misunderstanding exists," she declared.

"If all the aids were abolished today, airplanes could continue to fly," she said. "Of course, their performance would be curtailed."

"I do not want to belittle the importance of flying aids, and I strongly urge that the Department of Commerce continue its good work," but she pointed out that it was not absolutely essential.

She asserted that the air transport industry is still in its infancy, and that accidents were inevitable in the early years.

"I am proud of the industry, and all that it has done in its few years," she said, "but the balloon is deflated when I reflect that the airplane transport business compares in size with the button industry."

She praised the Bureau of Air Commerce for its efforts to increase the safety of the airplane as a machine. She told the sub-committee that she had recently flown the new Bureau of Air Commerce Hammond experimental plane.

"It may open the door to an entirely new conception of safety in aviation," she said.

"Miss Earhart appealed to the committee for Federal support of "starving inventors," whose activities, she declared, "may prove to be the life-blood of the aviation industry." She urged the committee to hear representatives from all ranks and professions who are studying aeronautics, and she declared some non-flyers may "have a perspective which the ordinary inventor lacks."

"Have any of you gentlemen ever heard a radio beacon?" Miss Earhart asked the committee.

Chairman Copeland said he doubted that any member was familiar with the beacon, but he said all the committee members had flown at one time or another.

"You should be familiar with a radio beacon by all means," she declared, and she offered to bring one to the committee room. None was available at the time, but later in the afternoon, true to her promise, she brought in a little receiving set and let the members hear the beacon from Washington Airport.

"I'm a crank on instrument flying," she said. "But I always remember there weren't any little lights or radio beacons on either the Atlantic or Pacific oceans. There was one light on the way to Mexico City, but I had to wire the keeper in advance and ask him to turn it on!"

1,197,539 Protest Townsend Inquiry

By the Associated Press.

Representative Tolan (Democrat), California, said yesterday he has received 1,197,539 affidavits from Townsend Club members throughout the country attesting that they gave their funds freely to the Townsend old-age-pension organization for use as leaders saw fit.

The Californian, member of the special House committee investigating the Townsend plan, said the affidavits are coming into his office at the rate of about 2,000 a day protesting the Congressional inquiry and affirming faith in the Townsend leaders.

He added that the affidavits are from 3,464 clubs in every State in the Union except Delaware. Each, he explained, is in the form of a petition which has been voted upon by Townsendites in club meeting and signed by the club presidents and secretaries.

The investigating committee plans to resume open hearings here Tuesday, when Dr. F. E. Townsend, founder of the movement, has been ordered to appear for questioning.

Frazier-Lemke Bill Inflation, Says Knox

Chicago, May 1 (AP).—Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher and candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, said in a statement tonight the Frazier-Lemke bill authorizing the issuance of $3,000,000,000 in greenbacks was "pure, unadulterated currency inflation."

"With inflation sentiment predominant in both Houses probably the only thing that stands in the way of this resort to printing-press money is a Presidential veto," Col. Knox said.

"This particular Frazier-Lemke political chicken now come to roost on the White House doorstep, has had ample invitation. The belief that the plight of the farmers can be cured by printing three billion paper dollars is no more warranted than the fantastic promises contained in President Roosevelt's recent Baltimore speech, in which he held out to the youth of the country the mirage of less work, higher wages, higher prices, greater comforts and greater leisure.

"Leisure in this work-a-day world," the publisher continued, "is the product of self-denial, diligence and thrift.

"The only kind of money that ever had any value, anywhere, any time, is money that represents intrinsic worth. You can't make leisure out of laziness and you can't make money out of paper."

Ritter Impeachment Verdict Fight Hinted

Miami, Fla., May 1 (AP).—Halsted L. Ritter, ousted as judge of the Federal District Court here by the Senate, today continued to occupy his offices and observers believed it indicated he would not accept the impeachment verdict as final. There was no comment from the former judge or his Miami attorney, Carl T. Hoffman, but it was indicated that a statement on the subject would be issued by Hoffman within the next few days.

Cadet Killed in Crash Of Army Pursuit Plane

Tydings at Bedside As His Mother Dies

Havre de Grace, Md., May 1 (AP). Mrs. Mary Tydings, mother of Senator Millard Tydings, of Maryland, died at her home tonight. She was 72.

Senator Tydings was with his mother when she died. He came from Washington yesterday when her condition became grave. The Senator said that she had recognized him and spoke to him after his arrival.

Mrs. Tydings was stricken with paralysis last June. She had been confined to her bed since then, but her health had been considered good until last week, when she began to decline.

Pictures of Roosevelt Displaced in San Juan

San Juan, Puerto Rico, May 1 (AP). The Puerto Rican flag was raised today over the City Hall at Ponce, and pictures of President Roosevelt and former President Hoover were reported to have been removed, as independence advocates continued their demonstrations.

The Puerto Rican flag was raised on many other insular public buildings. Police, in some instances, interfered with the raising and others ordered the flag down.

Speeding Costs Rep. Zioncheck Total of $266

Is Fined $66 and Collateral Forfeited; He and Bride Yachting at Sea.

Representative Marion A. Zioncheck, the Seattle buffoon, was yachting on the Atlantic Ocean last night, far from switchboards and traffic cops.

In Alexandria, Va., where he was arrested for driving his 12-cylinder roadster at a 62-mile-an-hour clip Thursday and later charged with disorderly conduct for his alleged cursing of his captor, Police Court Judge James R. Duncan declared Zioncheck's $200 collateral forfeited.

On top of that action, Judge Duncan fined Zioncheck $66 on charges of reckless driving and disorderly conduct.

Bench Warrant Issued.

He issued a capias, a bench warrant calling for Zioncheck's arrest should he ever appear again in Alexandria.

Meanwhile an Associated Press dispatch from Beaufort, N. C., pictured Zioncheck in the role of a deep sea sailor.

An hour after Zioncheck and his bride of three days, the former Rubye Nix, a PWA stenographer, arrived at Beaufort, they chartered a yacht and went fishing.

Zioncheck, according to the dispatch, was in an expansive mood and passed cigars around to the attendants at a filling station where he parked his speedy roadster.

Accommodations for Eight.

The yacht he chartered is the Idle On, owned by Capt. John Dickinson. The craft has accommodations for eight and can cruise for several days. There was no indication of how long the Zionchecks would be away.

Motorcycle Policeman George S. Ellmore, who arrested Zioncheck in Alexandria, is what is known in that historic city as a "he-man." But he was too ashamed in Police Court yesterday to repeat the names which he charges Zioncheck called him.

Ellmore, however, did quote Zioncheck as saying after his arrest:

"When are you damn cops going to leave me alone?"

Maurice Rosenberg, Zioncheck's attorney, pleaded with Judge Duncan to postpone the case until next Friday.

Refuses Postponement.

"No," said Judge Duncan, "we cannot make an exception because he is a member of Congress. He occupies the same position with me as any other defendant. I am going to hear this case in his absence."

The breakdown on the fine was as follows:

Reckless driving, $50, and $3 costs.

Disorderly conduct, $10, and $3 costs.

Since New Year's morning, when he was arrested for commandeering a switchboard and ringing every telephone in a Connecticut avenue apartment house, Zioncheck's escapades have cost him well over $300.

His recent arrest here on a charge of speeding 70 miles an hour on Connecticut avenue cost him $50 on the charge and an additional $20 for contempt of court.

Los Angeles 'Ape Man' Is Hanged as Kidnaper

San Quentin, Calif., May 1 (AP).—Thomas E. Dugger, 31, called an "ape man" by Los Angeles police because of his record of abducting and assaulting women, died on the gallows today—the first kidnaper to pay the supreme penalty under a new State law permitting infliction of the death penalty on a kidnaper who harms his captive.

Dugger, termed by alienists "psychopathic and sadistic but not legally insane," ate a big breakfast, refused religious consolation and walked stolidly to his doom.

Dugger admitted assaulting Mrs. Evelyn Johnson, Mrs. E. T. Quickenden and Mrs. Lela Embree. Mrs. Johnson lost the sight of one eye as the result of injuries inflicted by Dugger.

LULA MAE McCONNELL,

Mother

Mrs. McConnell's head was severely battered and her clothes, except for a flimsy shirt waist, were ripped from her body.

Throughout the kitchen and dining room the furniture was overturned and rugs were twisted awry, evidence of the valiant struggle put up by the frail mother against an apparently powerful assailant.

Chief of Police Ray Bryan said the motive for the brutal attack was as mystifying as the identity of the attacker.

Mrs. McConnell's pocketbook was found undisturbed on a mantle and physicians said there was no evidence she had been criminally assaulted.

A blood transfusion shortly before her death produced only a feeble rally.

A few minutes before the attack Mrs. McConnell and Mrs. Joe Sessions, a neighbor, had been preparing a spaghetti dinner for 16 guests. Mrs. Sessions said she left and in a few minutes, from her own apartment, saw Mrs. McConnell and a Negro nurse take the twins, Carol and Lynn, across the street.

Investigating screams from her neighbor's apartment, Mrs. Sessions said she and Grant Matheny ran to investigate. They found Mrs. McConnell on the floor of the dining room.

Officers later found light crimson stains in the bathtub and expressed belief the attacker washed his hands there.

Fifty Millions Apiece.

Reports that the 1937 Navy appropriation bill makes provision for two new battleships may easily be misinterpreted. An arrangement that construction of the ships would be undertaken only to match similar building on the part of signatories to the London treaties has aroused unwarranted fears that an aggressive naval race might be in prospect. Fortunately, more complete details as to the Administration's plans discount any such belief.

In the first place, the new battleships, if they should be built, would merely replace obsolete vessels. The recent naval conference extended the age limit of battleships from 20 to 26 years, thus discouraging large-scale replacement building. But the two American vessels in question would be 29 and 27 years old before new ships could be built to take their place, even if construction should begin this year. The substitution of new ships for vessels that have reached this stage of obsolescence could scarcely be considered provocative.

Moreover, Great Britain has already announced plans for the construction of two new battleships. These, too, would merely replace overage craft. Consequently, their construction could not be reasonably interpreted as the beginning of a naval race. Apparently the Baldwin government is convinced that two new capital ships are essential to safeguard British interests on the seas.

Nevertheless it would be wise policy for Congress to let the demonstrable needs of this country control the outlay for expensive craft of this kind, instead of making our program contingent upon the requirements of another nation. A matching program is conducive to rivalry, even when the right to build in either case is unquestioned.

With many sections of the world in turmoil, it is perhaps too much to hope that the battleship will be abandoned as an instrument of war or national defense. But it is not unreasonable to ask that the construction of these floating fortresses, at a cost of $51,000,000 each, be undertaken only as a measure of last resort. The United States, in particular, can afford to maintain the lead in efforts to restrict excessive armaments, as indeed we are officially pledged to do.

Traffic Through Georgetown.

Immediate interest in the move to protect Georgetown's residential area from arterial traffic centers in P street. Property owners there fear that the quiet atmosphere of their homes will be destroyed if this old cobblestone street is made attractive to through traffic before adequate by-passes have been provided. In a large sense, however, all of Georgetown is vitally concerned by this proposal. And the rest of the community can not be unconcerned, for the precedent established in this case may have a direct bearing upon all residential areas.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission has interested itself in the appeal from P-street residents because it involves a real problem in city planning. Choice residential areas in many cities have been ruined by careless routing of traffic. People do not care to live adjacent to streets where the roar of trucks, buses and motor cars plagues them day and night. Such "corridor" communities are almost invariably blighted, to the detriment of the city as a whole.

Since Georgetown is one of the most charming sections of Washington, it would be nothing short of tragic to honeycomb its quaint houses and lovely gardens with traffic arteries. Already a great deal of damage has been done by overburdening streets, especially Q street, with traffic they were not designed to carry. This policy can not long be followed without seriously impairing a tranquil environment that can more easily be destroyed than reproduced.

Sentimental, historic and esthetic interests might be minimized to some extent if Georgetown's residential streets afforded the most convenient routes between the downtown area and more distant residential sections. But such is not the case. P street, for example, runs to a dead end at over-congested Wisconsin avenue, and in the other direction leads into the bottleneck of Dupont Circle. What is needed is a by-pass that will carry through traffic away from these quaint, narrow streets, instead of trying to force it through more rapidly.

Fortunately, the Commissioners are studying the possibility of connecting K street with Key Bridge by a viaduct. With the aid of the Park and Planning Commission, it should not be difficult to devise some plan that will protect Georgetown and facilitate traffic too.

Not Wholly Consistent.

The relatively temperate tone of the resolutions adopted by the delegates to this week's convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce was in marked contrast to the bitterly hostile character of those passed a year ago.

To be sure there is rather less incentive to attack specific undertakings at the present time. The fate of the AAA has been settled and the NRA has likewise been consigned to oblivion. Moreover, the few important measures now pending, which intimately affect business, give rise to some differences of opinion among business men themselves. Almost the only major piece of current legislation that qualifies for the unsparing condemnation of the Chamber is the tax bill. That is characterized with reminiscent finality as a measure that "should have no place in the legislation of a period of economic recovery."

The moderation of the current resolutions is doubtless attributable in good part to a conviction that it would be futile to cry over spilt milk. But the change in tactics is also encouraging indication of a more conciliatory attitude, which should facilitate mutually constructive co-operation between business and Government in the future.

Thus the delegates acknowledge the responsibility of business to provide increased security for workers, and urge definite action to facilitate re-employment of idle men. They also show a realistic appreciation of the importance of foreign trade, indorse the reciprocal trade agreements in principle and advocate "reasonable" stabilization of foreign exchange.

The favorable impression produced by these amiable, if rather vague, declarations is unfortunately marred by an undiscriminating opposition to the social security program, not in detail but in principle. Such "interference with the free play of economic forces," it is piously asserted, "retards both the material and spiritual progress of the Nation." Most unfortunately for logic the Chamber then solemnly proceeded to repudiate its unqualified indorsement of laissez faire by demanding direct subsidization of the merchant marine.

The habit of thus alternately demanding that business be freed from all legislative control, and then calling for legislative assistance when and as desired, is a characteristic failing of organized business groups. The Chamber of Commerce can greatly improve its constructive contribution to a solution of national problems by discarding unworkable and inconsistent formulae and addressing itself to the task of reconciling the conflicting desires and objectives of its own membership along lines which will resist the most searching critical analysis.

Seeking A Fiscal Formula.

Taxation of Federal property in the District has often been suggested as a means of equitably dividing expenses of the Capital between the local and national governments. Revival of this suggestion by Commissioner Hazen is particularly appropriate at a time when the Government is rapidly expanding its properties here, and at the same time reducing its contribution to municipal expenses.

Washington derives most of its revenue from the general property tax. As the Federal Government absorbs more and more of the land within the District and builds more structures requiring fire and police protection, without charge, expenses will tend to increase much faster than income. Already, Commissioner Hazen points out, the Government owns 40 per cent of the city's real estate and pays less than 15 per cent of its municipal expenditures. Carried still further, this unfair arrangement would place an unbearable burden upon District taxpayers.

Mr. Hazen's appeal for a new method of determining the Government's equitable share of responsibility for financing the Capital City is a fitting sequence to the findings of L. H. Parker, of the Joint Congressional Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation. Through an impartial study of Federal statistics, Mr. Parker showed that Washington has a greater per capita tax than any comparable city, and that tax increases here have been twice as great as those of any other city in recent years. In the face of that showing, rational adjustment of the fiscal relationship between the Nation and its Capital City is imperative.

However, it does not appear that Commissioner Hazen has provided a complete answer to this baffling problem. Some of the property owned by the Government here is maintained largely for the benefit of District residents, as, for example, the parks. Obviously it would be unfair to ask Congress to pay the District the equivalent of a tax on areas of that sort. To attain permanent recognition a fiscal agreement would have to be scrupulously fair to the Nation as well as to the District.

Commissioner Hazen's proposal may serve as the basis for discussion of this vital subject, and it is certainly one of the important factors on which a new fiscal arrangement should be based. But some weight must also be given to the service rendered the community by the Government, the service rendered the Government by the community, extraordinary municipal expenses by reason of the fact this is the Capital, etc. All of these issues might be worked out with little difficulty if assigned to a group of experts representing the two governments.

While that is being done, it would strain the imagination of any member of Congress to find one reasonable argument for reduction of the so-called Federal lump-sum contribution from the present low figure of $5,700,000.

The Price Of Votes.

President Roosevelt continues to maintain that all of the $1,500,000,000 he has requested for relief of the unemployed the coming fiscal year should be allocated to the WPA. It is unfortunate that his strange reluctance to systematizing relief outlays should be paralleled by a new crop of charges that the WPA is up to its neck in politics.

Representative Berlin, of Pennsylvania, asserts that he was defeated for renomination in that State's recent primary by a former WPA director, after WPA trucks displaying pictures of his opponent carried employes of the work-relief system to the polls. This follows the charges of Stephen Raushenbush that propaganda against him was distributed in Pennsylvania through WPA pay envelopes. From every quarter of the country comes similar evidence of preliminary tryouts for the biggest vote-buying scandal in the history of the United States.

In this election year a constructive Congressional investigation of the unbelievable WPA setup is probably too much to expect. Nor is such inquiry really necessary to demonstrate the waste and graft which the organization encourages. The refusal of the Administration to further any investigation is itself tantamount to an admission that the facts must be concealed until after election.

But Presidential opposition to the modest attempt of Congress to allocate further relief appropriations to more carefully-prepared projects is surprising. Not merely the uncharitable will conclude that Mr. Farley has passed word it is necessary to have $1,500,000,000 of other people's money available to hold in line until November those who know too much about the inner workings of WPA.

Promoting What They Fear.

Almost as Secretary Morgenthau announced that the deficit for the current fiscal year might reach $5,966,000,000, the inflation bloc in the House won their long fight to force a vote upon the Frazier-Lemke mortgage refinancing bill. The number of signatures required to discharge the House Rules Committee from consideration of the bill was completed with the addition of the name of Representative Berlin, of Pennsylvania. His reasons for signing throw an interesting sidelight upon the motives that induce some of our legislators to indorse or oppose inflationary proposals.

Mr. Berlin is aggrieved because he was defeated for renomination after he had consented to withdraw his name from the discharge petition. Apparently for no higher purpose than to hit back at his political enemies, the gentleman from Pennsylvania then reappended his signature to the petition, thus insuring a vote.

It is to be feared that many members of the House are equally little disposed to judge inflationary bills on their merits. They either embrace them as vote catchers or avoid them if they seem politically dangerous. If the House would shake off its fears of transitory and over-advertised demagogues like Father Coughlin, the absurd Frazier-Lemke bill would soon follow Townsendism to oblivion.

The danger of legislative enactment of inflationary measures of this sort comes from spineless yielding to external pressure, real or fancied. The members of Congress who honestly believe that currency inflation would be good for the country are a mere handful. It is the Congressmen who lack both convictions and courage who promote the very external pressures which they so pitifully fear.

The entrance fee for Georgia's presidential preferential primary has been fixed at $10,000. Anybody who wishes to throw his hat in this ring will first have to pass it around.

What Youth Prefers.

From Vogue.

We recently papered the undergraduate world from Princeton, N. J., to Leland Stanford, Calif., with questionnaires asking for masculine comment on feminine fashions and qualities. They came whipping back to us with an all-time high in percentage-of-returns. We found the college man frantically eager to express his opinions.

Answers to our first question: "Do you like girls who are pretty rather than smart, or smart rather than pretty?" showed an overwhelming majority for the smart girl. "Lots of pretty girls can look awfully sloppy," they added, and, "If she looks smart we think she's pretty."

We ventured further in our next request: "Number in order of importance these qualities in a girl: Neatness, vitality, sex appeal, beauty, distinction, sweetness, style."

Here's the final rating: 1. Vitality; 2. Sex Appeal; 3. Neatness; 4. Distinction; 5. Style; 6. Beauty; 7. Sweetness.

There's a pretty comment on this year of grace: vitality first and sweetness last. Any number of hard-boiled juniors and seniors went so far as to cross sweetness entirely off the list. It was only the boys from Johns Hopkins southward who kept it in the batting at all.

The Causes Of War.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
It is rather strange that with a universal desire for peace the cost of armament should be mounting at a ruinous pace in all civilized countries. There are several reasons for this.

Our disarmament conferences are composed of militarists whose main objective is maximum armament for their own countries. And this is backed up by the enormous power of the military establishment and the patriotic organizations at home. The normal man wants peace. The militarist professes to want peace. Invariably he commences, "Heaven forbid that we shall ever have another war, but—," then a burst of patriotism which is the twin brother of militarism. The spokesmen for peace are inconsistent. They portray in eloquent phrases the damnable character of war but do nothing whatsoever in revealing the chief causes of war and its consequent elimination.

Medical science wastes little time in reciting the horrors of tuberculosis but it has greatly reduced the ravages of that disease by combating its origin in a rational way. For peace, men should do likewise. A powerful cause of war is the system of tariff walls surrounding all countries and which prevent free access to all seaports and that easy exchange of products which is essential to prosperity. But the basic cause of war is an unnatural system of taxation which produces an artificial scarcity of land with consequent over-crowding of population. To be consistent the churches of America and peace organizations everywhere should devote their energies to the root of the evil in order to secure international free trade and a rational system of taxation.

Washington State's Choice.

What is wrong with Washington State that she elects for one of her lawmakers a boy badly needing discipline—a man ignorant of the elements of citizenship, to say nothing of the requisites for lawmaking?

May the State do better next time.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Every music lover of Washington should rebel against the forming of an orchestra by Mr. Bunchuck. After all of the struggle the Washington Symphony has had to maintain a fine orchestra and in view of the fact that Mr. Bunchuck is actually trying to secure the barge used by our esteemed Hans Kindler, who originated the idea of the summer concerts, is a gross injustice.

Since I was a child the need of a fine orchestra has been realized and now that we, under Hans Kindler's able leadership, are actually having one, comes this total stranger, threatening to undo all of Hans Kindler's faithful work. He has been up against tremendous odds and if the people of Washington permit an entire stranger to usurp his rights they should bow their heads in shame.

E. M. BENEDICT.
Silver Spring, Md., April 29.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
"Astonishment" is a mild expression of my feelings as I read the announcement of Mr. Fairfax Oyster that he and a few other wealthy friends were to finance a certain Mr. Bunchuk in the establishment of an orchestra in this city. It appears that Mr. Bunchuk is deeply in love with this city and wishes to provide an orchestra for it. Some of us were under the impression that we already have an orchestra here, and a pretty good one.

One can only wonder why Mr. Oyster and his group of wealthy friends do not contribute to the support of the National Symphony Orchestra and thus assure the summer night concerts, rather than to experiment with a wholly new orchestra and a totally unknown conductor.

EDWARD C. POTTER.
Washington, April 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
We Washingtonians who have the interest of our National Symphony Orchestra at heart, wish to thank you for your excellent editorial today regarding the orchestra.

Personally I do not fear the "survival chances" of the National Symphony Orchestra. Its support is too city-wide, with no one man or one group supporting it, but scores of groups. Every established musical organization, music school, college, the public private and Government departments, the Army and Navy, the lover of music, and many business men, who, if they are not music lovers, regard the orchestra with civic pride—all these groups are numbered among the subscribers to the sustaining fund and are members of the National Symphony Orchestra Association. I believe it would be difficult for any other organization to obtain such a following group that has always operated on a "pay as you go" basis and in consequence always perform what they promise.

I think the "cream of the jest" really is, that Mr. Bunchuk and his backers, hearing of the marvelous success of the concerts last summer, with their audiences of 12 to 15,000 people, do not know that a large proportion of the audiences paid no admission, but heard the concert free because of their being given on Government property. They would do well to ponder also on the fact that notwithstanding the help given by having the barge and the orchestra-shell donated, the concerts were given with a deficit of more than $700— scarcely a commercial proposition!

Washington, April 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Thank you for your splendid editorial in The Post of April 30, re the proposed new summer orchestra. I can not believe the public will support any orchestra other than our own National Symphony Orchestra which initiated our very successful concerts last summer.

MARY CRYDER.
Washington, April 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Just when Washington is beginning to pride itself on having a symphony orchestra which can take its place with the finest in the Nation—and one whose only differences with the local union authorities are brought about by the orchestra's insistence on a high musical standard—along comes a gentleman whose principal claim seems to be that he is "crazy about the town," and who proposes to establish a rival symphony orchestra, which is to have no difficulties with the union and no financial uncertainties.

This is harly the question. Does Mr. Bunchuk also propose to furnish Washington with music of the same standard of performance as that which the National Symphony has been giving us for the past five seasons? Mr. Bunchuk may be a symphony orchestra conductor of the highest capabilities; I am too ignorant of his background to be in a position to judge, having heard of him only as an assistant to the late Roxy—which, of course, would have nothing to do with his qualifications as a leader of the kind of orchestra that the National Symphony has become.

But, unless he can promise finer performances of the same grade of music, and all that we have been getting from the National Symphony during these past years, he is a bold man indeed to imagine that the friends of the already established orchestra will desert it to support a doubtful experiment.

"Hackers," "Rippers," Etc.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The Post carries two defenses of the park hackers and concrete spreaders in one day. You must have been saving them up! As personal opinions there can be with them no squabble. But as arguments—they're so full of holes a full answer in rebuttal would override space limits.

It is a crime to assert the attitude of the park "salvagers" has been high-handed. That 80 per cent, not the 20 per cent or less, deserve a voice in what is done to public places? Objectors are not all cranks and grumbling critics. They're open to conviction. They want less, not more. They'd really like to believe the designers and advocates know what they're doing, and be satisfied at the results. Their expectations, based on past experience, are nil.

BENJAMIN F. KELTNER.
Washington, April 30.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
It has been pathetic to read the grief of the people of taste over the ripping up of their loved old parks by the salaried fanatics, afflicted with money-squander. Already the city looks like a great stone mausoleum.

Are the parks to be modeled on that queer monstrosity at 16th and W streets? A great costly playhouse for the roller-skating hoipoloi. And for the comfy old benches do we get those cold, cold stone ones?

My heart goes out to that lover of the old lilacs, one clump of which is more beautiful than any thing they can offer us in exchange—be it stone or cement.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
If the park daddies and their million bucks are so intent on blasting the parks, might I recommend a real job to their tender mercies and hectic zeal? It's the inside walk of the Elipse.

Think the merry time they'd have, cracking it loose, widening the original walk. Or better, whacking tar out of both of 'em and putting in a new 12-foot walk—that seems their minimum choice of width. Grass won't grow betwixt the walks, despite the futile yearly effort to thwart this reluctance of nature. A half-mile of new 12-foot walk! Boy, what fun!!

Businessmen's Questions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
May I sincerely compliment Mr. Phillip J. Fay, of San Francisco, for his wonderful American policies expressed so ably in his speech before the United States Chamber of Commerce. It is a good sign that Americans are at last beginning to think straight and sanely.

Can the American people afford to accept any form of Government as a subterfuge to substitute our American form of Government? I contend that it is unfair to continue dictatorial policies under the guise of American Government that crowd small independent businessmen out of business or to assassinate their standing or character on trumped-up charges that they have violated technical laws. These laws are un-American and should never have been attempted in this, the land of sweet liberty. I call the attention of every thinking man and woman to those lines of gold and fire; namely, "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

There is a reason when small business men, like the writer, ask questions. Having been put out of business, many of us desire light, and someone said there shall be light. Whence comes such theories of Government and policies? Are we to believe it the result of higher education or the leadership of our American institutions of learning, and from what source comes such grandiloquent ideas?

The Post Impressionist

Another Golden Opportunity.

Post Office, Saturday.

THEY say there's no chance for a young man or woman to get on in life any more: All the arts, professions and trades are overcrowded; big business has little business sewed up, and the men at the top—where we were once assured there was "always room"—are picking their successors from the narrow group of the heirs of their bodies.

That's what people are saying.

* * *

They make, to be sure, an exception of politics.

It's only, they say, in Washington that every other man and woman is a politician by choice: in Indiana and Ohio, they are born politicians and can't help it. Elsewhere, the popularity—and, consequently, the overcrowding—of the lofty profession of politics is notably declining.

The latest public-school questionnaires in several States show modern youth so deteriorated that hardly one in a thousand expresses a desire to be President. And hasn't Senator Borah made a speech against the grand old Tradition of Favorite Sons?

But politics is, people insist, the sole exception.

* * *

They have, of course, been bemoaning this shrinkage of opportunity for quite some time. Your Columnist himself said it, back in the days when Charles Edward Russell was converting everybody to socialism—which was so shortly before Bill Heywood and Jack Reed and all the other direct-actionists (slightly aided and abetted by the World War) inadvertently reconverted so many of us to conservatism.

However, the statement is being made nowadays with even more violence, if not force, than ever. For some months—until yesterday—the Post-Impressionist himself was headed toward a fresh belief in it.

* * *

We said:

"Look at political economy—even it! It was 'the dreary science.' Nobody wanted to study it in college; in later life, it was pursued only by those who had a genius for it: you needed a very special brain. Until the first day of the Depression, the plain American citizen shunned it as he would the plague. Yet, by the time the 1932 Presidential conventions had adjourned, there wasn't a single individual of voting age in this country who hadn't become a political economist. And now the age of consent for that vocation has been lowered to fifteen."

To the scarcely two or three voices weakly protesting that new callings would be invented to meet new needs we made sad answer:

"This overcrowding of the field of economics indicates that the necessary inventiveness has been strained until it is broken."

* * *

Yesterday we did, after all, come across evidence which confutes our pessimism. A commodious new occupation has been devised—and the popularity of the need it serves guarantees its ability to take up the slack of unemployment, or prevent the wastage of manpower, or whatever the correct phrase may be.

We saw the portent in a window of one of those ex-store premises now devoted to "Games of Skill." It was a sign that read:

PING-PONG PARLORS:
BEGINNERS INVITED!
POLITE PROFESSIONALS
PROVIDED AS PARTNERS!

Golf is the bondsman of weather, but the celluloid sphere knows no restraint. Reflect upon the size of the crowds that patronize the Ping-Pong Parlors of this land of ours. See how they grow. Realize that every player must be, at some time, a beginner in need of polite instruction.

And then deny, if you dare, our hope for America's economic future!

* * *

What says the head of an impressive institution of learning?

"The true university must embrace schools that produce masters in every walk of life, men capable of leadership wherever useful leadership is needed."

Many a graduate of a woman's college is today—or tonight—earning an honest livelihood as a paid partner in some Palace of the Dance. The day should soon dawn when capped and gowned seniors are given a guarantee of economic security in the form of a diploma qualifying them as Partners-at-Ping-Pong.

* * *

Even the lower grades of learning must not neglect this field. The manual-training schools cannot afford to overlook the opportunity. The continuation schools and the night schools should seize it.

We commend it to the Secretaries of Labor, Agriculture, Commerce and to Commissioner Studebaker for serious consideration by their Federal Board of Vocational Education.

* * *

And we commend it even more heartily to the Committees on Platform of the coming Presidential conventions. For electoral fortune is highly likely to favor that forward-looking party which advocates governmental relief by increasing the numbers of polite professional ping-pong partners.

Dickinson's 'Dog Food.'

Something tells me that a country which has fed on banquet chicken, New England shore dinners and the barbecued beef which mocks the hunger and the bridgework of the American tourist along the highways will roll with the punch of Senator Dickinson's charge that many of our citizens have been eating canned dog food and come up smiling. I don't know the ingredients of these rations which are put up for the canine package trade, but I have had much experience in public eating places and remember many meals which might have aroused the Humane Society had they been offered to a dog.

The Senator may not get around as much as some of us. Do you suppose he has ever sat through an alumni dinner or the annual get-together of the district managers of a big American firm? If so, wouldn't he remember the cold, pale consomme, the gutta-percha broiler with the fuzz barely singed, the canned peas, done in a shade of house paint green, the traditional hardshell roll and the tasteless butter?

Has he ever whoa-ed up his car at a clam chowder parlor anywhere along the coast of Maine or a turtle steak resort in Florida to torture his teeth and innards with gritty chowder or corduroy meat? Has the Hon. Gent from Iowa never attempted that favorite American delicacy hewn from the carcass of an abandoned heavy duty tire burned in the fumes of a gasoline incinerator and served as the house specialty at a thousand roadside cabins, East and West, all of them known as Bill's Bar-B-Q, Dine and Dance, Good Eats? If not, he can hardly call himself a hundred per cent American, and if so would he inflict these horrors on a dog?

* * * *

The Senator overstrained for dramatic effect in charging that his fellow men were down to dog food. It might have been better for his purpose had he said, on the contrary, that only a few Americans were known to be up to it.

It is my impression that in the United States the family dog eats about the same sort of fare that the family gets along on. As a rule he is a genial, understanding mutt who knows his prerogatives and comes to the table with the family to sit by, not exactly begging—for that is bad manners—but making little gestures with his ears and tail which amount to an eloquent silent appeal. He gets a splinter of meat here, a dab of the dressing or bread and gravy there and keeps his appetite in check that way until dinner is over, when he gets all that is left on his own plate by the back stoop.

If he is a dog on special rations he usually does much better, for kennel dogs are fed on good meat bought fresh from the market in large quantities, cooked by a dog expert according to a veterinary's instructions and served on time with appropriate vegetables.

Certainly one kennel of dogs of which I have knowledge was better fed than most of the people of the class for whom the Senator has been breaking his heart. They eat beef almost exclusively, and their hotel bill is a serious item to the man who owns the herd, but, then, the dogs sell for $100 or more per head, and mediocre beef, which brings only a few dollars on the hoof out West, is converted into very superior dog flesh in a few months.

Human beings are more fastidious than dogs in some respects, but they have other tastes which dogs abhor. I am thinking at the moment of whisky and gin and cigarettes. I believe you could be arrested if you were to inflict on any dog a half dozen highballs or Tom Collinses or tied the poor mut down and gassed him with the fumes of a package of cigarettes.

Farm Belt Observer Analyzes President's Baltimore Proposal To Forbid Work Before 18, Finding It A Sorry Challenge To Youth.

By Hilding Siversen.
Special Correspondent of The Post.

Omaha, Nebr.

President Roosevelt, in his recent Baltimore speech, proposed that the young people of the United States stay out of productive employment until they are "at least 18 years old." He suggested that they should remain in school "to the completion of their education," and that old people, say at the age of 65, should also be relegated to the nonworking class. The objective of such a program, he said, would be to readjust the employment of the Nation so as to give more opportunity to those between the ages of 19 and 65.

The fact that former President Hoover, a day or two later, inferentially indorsed the general idea does not decrease but rather increases one's amazement that such doctrines should be seriously handed out. It seems almost impossible that such statements could go forth without awakening a sharp wave of criticism. Perhaps the people and their commentators have become benumbed to unsound panaceas and have lost their power to react. The idea, for instance, that education is "completed" in school is preposterous.

It is certain that not one practical farmer in one thousand, in this Mississippi Valley, if he applies the theory to his own life and that of his family, will agree with it for one moment. Sooner or later there will probably be a careful analysis of the proposal. It is rather surprising that some of the members of the President's Cabinet, who are reputed to have had callouses on their hands at one time, did not check this utterance before it was made.

Possible Child Labor Amendment Seen In Talk.

The theory of President Roosevelt, which may amount to a trial balloon for something of a more concrete nature to come later, was one of two things. Either it was a pious wish, based upon an idyllic situation in which parents would somehow find it possible to protect their children from useful toil and give them all a college education; or it was based upon a proposed statute to prohibit such labor. The first proposition is meaningless, so it must be assumed that a child labor amendment is contemplated.

What would happen if a Federal law prohibiting young men and women from working at useful labor until they are 19 years old should be made valid?

It is perfectly well known to psychologists, as well as to all practical men and women, that habits formed during adolescence are permanently fastened on the mind of the adult. Habits of industry are then formed. If a young person is taught that it is not only unnecessary for him to work, but economically undesirable, the Nation will breed a collection of loafers, not only as to physical labor but in intellectual pursuits as well. Child labor is plainly undesirable. Children should be protected from physical labor in factories until they are well into adolescence. But they should certainly be encouraged to start out as early as possible to develop self-reliant and self-initiated work of various sorts which will form the basis for future usefulness.

Farm Children Would Feel Change Greatly.

On the farm this tendency to start children at useful work, when the practice is followed moderately, is the reason for farm boys and girls setting an example in thrift and usefulness in any vocation they may later adopt.

On the farm even the small children are taught to do little chores like gathering eggs, carrying wood or coal, or feeding the chickens. When they are 10 or 12 they learn to drive horses and milk cows. When they reach the age of 16 or 17 they are usually full grown and if necessary can do a man's or woman's work. Wise parents on the farm do not permit their children to indulge in overwork, which is as bad as underwork, but they do encourage a moderate amount of toil which will give the youth an idea of what to expect in later years and accustom him to the fundamental thought that "to eat you must work."

If a law were passed to eliminate this practice it would be met with such a storm of objection that it is difficult even to imagine the result. The spectacle of husky young men and women idling at the county seat while their parents work hard all day to educate them, and at the same time promulgate idleness, is a spectacle not pleasant to contemplate. It would lead inevitably not only to physical but to moral decay.

Of course, one of the important things that President Roosevelt deftly slid over was the matter of how the parents could support their children and educate them. Where would they get the money? Who would subsidize their education?

Middle West Asks Only Regular Re-employment.

It would be far better if President Roosevelt would call off his theorists and his campaign of frightfulness against the business world, permit industry to go ahead and work out its own salvation, thus restoring employment to millions now out of work. If this were done, perhaps many parents would be able to find money with which to support and educate their sons and daughters.

One of these days the Nation as a whole is going to awaken with a loud bang to the fact that the underlying philosophy of the New Deal is very generally destructive of the wholesome ideals which have caused Americans of all previous generations to work out their own salvation.

It used to be considered good citizenship to learn habits of industry and thrift early in life. It used to be considered wholesome to depend upon oneself for a living. The present-day challenge to youth is: "See what you can do to get the Government to support you. See what you can do to get out of working. Don't think of what you can give to your Government—see what you can get out of it.

"Let's not expand our field of operations. Let's contract them. Produce as little as possible. Work as little as possible. Let the other fellow and posterity pay the bill. Keep the total number of unemployed the same as it is today, but give up your own right to learn how to make a living in the days of your susceptible adolescence, when your life-habits are being formed, so that middle-aged people can be given jobs that you are ready and willing to perform."

Arlington Rites For War Flier Will Be Today

James A. Meissner Died in Birmingham; Won Service Cross.

The ashes of James A. Meissner, who was decorated three times for heroic flying during the World War, will be buried at 11 o'clock this morning in Arlington Cemetery. He died January 16 in Birmingham, where he was employed as a superintendent in a steel mill.

A senior at Cornell University, Mr. Meissner enlisted in the Army Air Corps with the 147th Pursuit Squadron at the outbreak of the war. Early in May he attacked three enemy planes over the Forest de la Rappe in France, managing to bring one of them down.

Although during the fight the covering of his upper wings were torn away and he was later subjected to heavy anti-aircraft fire, he landed safely behind the American lines. For this act he was given the Distinguished Service Cross.

Latre he won the oak-leaf cluster by attacking two enemy planes, shooting one down and forcing the other to retreat. He also received the French Croix de Guerre.

Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Elva Meissner; three brothers, Harold G., of New York; Charles R., of Steubenville, Ohio, and C. Edward, of this city, and a sister, Mrs. Bertha M. Wendell, of New York.

Cross-Examination Of A Bridge Player.

(As suggested by a police drive on bridge clubs in New York recently.)

Q.—Now then, what is a bridge studio?

A.—A suite of rooms where you get over the idea you could make a living like Culbertson.

Q.—Can anybody get in?

A.—The entrance of the police would so indicate.

Q.—What is a duplicate contract bridge tournament?

Q.—Do these bridge players play for money?

Q.—How are these tournaments run?

A.—Each player pays a fee of $1. There may be, let us say, five tables. That makes $20. At the end of the play the house takes $10.

Q.—Does the proprietor play?

A.—If he does, with that percentage, he's crazy.

Q.—The contention has been raised that there is essentially no difference between bridge for money and the pinball game. In pinball you are showing your skill in getting a marble in a little hole.

A.—Yes, and in bridge you are trying to get your partner in a big hole.

Q.—But what is the essential difference between pinball games and bridge?

A.—No matter how long you play pinball nobody serves a bad cocktail or a mysterious sandwich.

Q.—Counsel has raised the issue that bridge is no different from golf or tennis where prizes, cash or otherwise are given. In both cases it is a contest of skill. Do you see any difference?

A.—Only that in golf you keep on playing for years after you have found it too deep for you.

Q.—It is common to play golf for money and yet there are no raids by gambling squads.

Q.—Why?

A.—Because in bridge at least three other people see that you keep your score correctly.

Q.—Do you personally believe in playing bridge for money?

A.—Yes, but if I don't get better hands pretty soon I'll change my mind.

Q.—Is bridge played with an ordinary deck of cards?

Q.—What system do you use? Culbertson or Lenz?

A.—I use the Ickes-Tugwell system.

Q.—Why do you call it the Ickes-Tugwell system?

Court.—Why doesn't somebody ask me some questions? Am I dummy in this game?

Prisoner (to prosecutor)—Who is he, a kibitzer?

Prosecutor—Sh-h-h! That's the judge.

Prisoner—Judge? How did we get into a court?

Prosecutor—I dunno, but you were probably vulnerable!

Fine Writing

By William Lyon Phelps

Pure English.

I should like to recommend to my readers the new series of little pamphlets by the Oxford University Press, New York. They are called S. P. E. tracts. S. P. E. means Society for Pure English and anyone may join on paying a fee; particulars can be obtained from the Oxford Press, New York. Forty-six of these tracts have already appeared, and I think some of these titles may appeal to readers of this column; for I believe that the majority of such readers are interested in English style, quite apart from the subject matter—that is, the use of spoken or written English as a fine art.

* * * *

Some, then, are Notes on Relative Clauses, The Study of American English, American Pronunciation, "Oxford" English, The Best English, and the latest tract is by Logan Pearsall Smith, an American living in England. It is called "Fine Writing." He justly attacks those who maintain that writing is not an art to be sedulously and conscientiously and joyfully practiced.

But he is, I think, unnecessarily pessimistic about present conditions. It is true that there are at this moment hardly any great poets, though I think the poems of A. E. Housman will live; but I cannot go all the way with Mr. Smith when he says "the writing of splendid verse seems, for the time at least, to be no longer possible." At any moment a genius may appear.

It is true that poetry, like music, comes by inspiration, whereas anyone who writes prose, can endeavor to improve it. It is therefore true, as Mr. Smith says, "the muses of Verse are unaccountable creatures, whose appearances are intermittent. But the Muses of Prose are always ready to respond to the appeal of those who call upon them."

* * * *

He then declares that today there are very few writers in the British Empire who are writing good prose, or who attempt to do so; and in his native country, the U. S. A., he implies that there are none. There are not many; but surely Edith Wharton, Willa Cather, Zona Gale, cultivate prose-writing as a fine art; and George Santayana learned the art of writing in the United States.

Standley Shifts 3 High Ranking Naval Officers

Rear Admirals Courtney, Block and Rowcliff Are Included.

A triple shift of high ranking naval officers was announced yesterday by Admiral William H. Standley, acting Secretary of the Navy, with the appointment of Rear Admiral Charles E. Courtney, commander of cruisers, battle force and cruiser division 2, to the post of director of naval communications.

Admiral Courtney will succeed Rear Admiral Gilbert J. Rowcliff, recently nominated for the post of judge advocate general of the Navy. Rear Admiral Claude C. Bloch, judge advocate general since 1934, is to be ordered to command a battleship division of the battle fleet. All changes become effective June 1.

The youngest admiral in the service, Admiral Rowcliff, 54, has served as director of naval communications since August of last year. A graduate of Annapolis in 1902, he was a White House aid to both Presidents Theodore Roosevelt and Taft. He was been a member of the war plans division of the office of naval operations, assistant budget officer for the department, and head of the department of engineering and aeronautics at the United States Naval Academy.

During the war he served as gunnery officer on the staff of Rear Admiral Hugh Rodman and later as executive officer of the U. S. S. New York. He was present when the German high seas fleet surrendered to the British fleet.

Rear Admiral Bloch, whom Admiral Rowcliff will succeed, served as budget officer of the department prior to his appointment as judge advocate general. A graduate of the Naval Academy in 1895, has received the Specially Meritorious Medal during the Spanish-American War for rescuing several Spaniards from a burning ship.

In 1923 he was appointed inspector of ordance in charge of the navl proving ground at Dahlgren, Va., and the naval powder factory at Indianhead, Md. The following year he became chief of the bureau of ordnance with the rank of rear admiral. After serving as commandant of the Navy Yard in 1931 he assumed the post of commander of the training squadron of the scouting force, a post he held until May, 1933, when he became budget officer.

A graduate of the Naval Academy in 1895, Rear Admiral Courtney has had only one tour of service in Washington, in the Bureau of Navigation from 1923 to 1924. He is a veteran of both the Spanish-American and World Wars.

Senate Tax Hearing

cession of business men who pronounced the pending tax measure unsound, unworkable and a halter on the neck of small business.

Following the same inquisitorial tactics that marked his examination of Senate Lobby Committee witnesses, Senator Black tangled with a number of witnesses, in an unsuccessful effort to show business associations, and in some cases, bank and power company connections of witnesses.

As Chairman Pat Harrison summoned his committee to meet at 9:30 a. m. in an effort to expedite tax hearings, a conservative Democratic movement was launched by Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, to abandon the proposed undistributed corporate earnings tax, and substitute in its place a combination increase in corporate and individual income taxation.

King Proposes Plan.

King insisted his proposal would raise $800,000,000, the amount of new taxes requested by the President. There appeared little likelihood, however, that he could muster sufficient committee support to displace the Administration's own plan.

It was a question by Senator Black that led Lane to exhort Congress to adjourn and go home.

"Are you interested in any other business?" asked the Alabaman.

"This business keeps us plenty busy," replied the Virginian. "For the last three years we have had to watch Washington at the same time, and that keeps us busier than we want to be."

Lane said his furniture concern had recently inaugurated an expansion program and constructed a new plant.

Regrets Expansion.

"If I had known this bill would be passed I would never have done it," he said.

When Senator Alben W. Barkley took issue with him, Lane added:

"If this bill passes, Senator, I wish you owned this plant instead of me."

The witness detailed the growth of his concern since 1912, and told the committee that under the proposed tax law he would have been "insolvent" long ago.

"When a concern is young and trying to grow, it needs every penny it can get to plow back into working capital. We are concerned because we think this bill will sap the growth of small corporations. It won't hurt us, because we have a large working reserve, but it will cut off a lot of our customers."

Assails Complexity.

The certified public accountant, who said students of taxation are all "shocked" at the complexity of the bill, was Joseph J. Klein, of the New York firm of Klein, Hinds & Finke.

"In my own experience with American and foreign taxation and with national and local taxation, I know of no taxing bill that approaches the present in apparent as well as actual complexity."

Apparently well versed in the proposed tax law nonetheless, Klein jested and punned with Senators, as he proposed new taxes on salt, sugar and coffee.

"Did you say a tax on salt?" asked Senator King, who hails from salt-producing Utah.

"Yes, Senator, but I'm not trying to rub it in," laughed Klein.

"Why that was what started the French revolution," recalled King.

Klein pleaded with the committee to postpone revenue law "tinkering" until next session, and meanwhile to appoint a joint congressional committee to study the whole field of Federal and State taxation.

Urges Income Tax Rise.

If immediate temporary taxes must be enacted, he urged, in addition to proposed taxes on salt, sugar and coffee, an increase in the corporate income tax rate, increased normal rates on individual income, reduced personal exemptions and a normal tax on dividends.

It was at M. L. Seidman, chairman of the taxation committee of the New York Board of Trade, that Senator Black directed most of his questioning.

Seidman, who declared the bill was conceived in haste and is "chock full of nonconstrued provisions," was asked who contributed to the New York Board of Trade.

Seidman said he did not know precisely. Then, in rapid succession, Black asked if the National City Bank was a member, if the Electric Bond & Share Co. belonged, and if Seidman worked for the Electric Bond & Share Co. Seidman replied he did not work for Electric Bond & Share, and he did not know whether the concerns named were members of the board. In a parting thrust, Black asked for the room number of Seidman's New York place of business.

Sharply criticizing the bill, Seidman said that big busines already is "worried," and the proposed tax measure would "make for a lag in confidence and a delay in return of business normalcy."

Contending that if corporations do not distribute all of their net income, under the bill they must pay as much as 42½ per cent of their entire net income "or an equivalent of 73.9 per cent of the net income returned," Seidman said:

"Charging a business 73.9 per cent for the right to retain its own working capital is an outrage under any tax system, and under whatever name the tax is imposed."

Keep "Big Business Big."

Seidman said the bill would operate to "keep big business big."

"At a time like the present, when the need for revenue is so great, when we are spending much more than we are taking in, when business is recuperating from the worst depression in our history, and when industry is so sensitive to every disturbing influence, how can we possibly afford to gamble such a vast sum of known public revenue for what is so much an adventure into the wilderness?"

Senator King last night asked Treasury tax experts to study revenue-producing possibilities of his substitute tax plan, which he thinks would raise $800,000,000.

King would riase the corporate income tax to 15 per cent on income up to $2,000; 16 per cent on income between $2,000 and $15,000; 17 per cent, between $15,000 and $40,000 and 18 per cent on over $40,000. The proposed undistributed earnings tax he would abandon altogether.

Like the pending proposal of Senator Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, King's plan calls for lowered individual income exemptions to $800 in the case of single persons, and to $2,000 for married persons. He would raise the normal income tax rate from 4 to 6 per cent, and graduate the surtax from 6 per cent to 75 per cent.

Senator Harrison said he has a plan of his own for raising additional revenue the Treasury says is needed, but he declined to disclose it. He laughed at suggestions that he might be thinking about an increase in the individual income tax rates.

Defense Completed.

Business testimony against the Administration's proposals became general after George C. Haas, Treasury research and statistics director, completed a defense of the measure begun on the previous day.

Joining in picking flaws in the pending proposals were Franklin S. Edmonds, Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce tax expert; Paul H. Wilson, of the Worcester, Mass., tanning firm of Graton & Knight, and R. C. Fulbright, of the Southern Pine Association.

Warning against embarking on a "gamble" in taxes, Edmonds said:

"This fiscal up and down in business is bad for industry. Under this bill you will have increased yield of revenue in taxes when you have a feast, and no increases when you have a famine."

Winding up the Administration's defense of the measure, Haas had sought to puncture the business contention that industry had used $27,000,000,000 out of reserves to provide labor and wages, and struck at arguments that the bill would foster monopoly and keep small business from expanding. Haas encountered some hostile questioning.

"I do not care to argue with you," Senator Josiah Bailey, South Carolina Democrat, said at one point, "but I believe your statement is inaccurate and misleading."

2 Navy Fliers Die In Honolulu Crash

Honolulu, May 1 (AP).—Lieut. William R. McCuddy, U. S. N., and chief aviation pilot Wilson were killed today when their naval observation plane fell into the ocean off Barbers Point, near Pearl Harbor, while they were observing submarine torpedo practice.

The two-seater observation type utility land plane carried only McCuddy and Wilson.

Another plane was nearby. It circled over the spot where the McCuddy plane plunged into the Pacific.

The second plane's signal for assistance brought out a "crash boat," two salvage boats, a mine-sweeper and several other aircraft.

The McCuddy plane sank immediately, and the bodise were not recovered.

TVA Acquires Alabama Lines, Test Suit Basis

By the United Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., May 1.—Alabama transmission lines of the Alabama Power Co., the issue on which constitutionality of TVA was tested this spring in the United States Supreme Court, today were acquired by the Tennessee Valley Authority for a cash consideration.

TVA paid the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation "about $1,150,000" for the controversial lines.

It was these units in the private utility's transmission system which formed the basis of the Ashwander suit on which the United States Supreme Court ruled last February that TVA has the right to sell surplus power generated at Wilson dam.

The lines involved lead out from Wilson dam through Lauderdale, Limestone, Colbert, Franklin, Lawrence and Morgan counties, connecting to city gates of the towns of Decatur, Russellville, Red Bay, Athens, Florence, Sheffield and Tuscumbia.

Physical properties within the city limits of the towns involved were not included in the deal. Despite this fact, the purchase probably opens a vast new field in northern Alabama for consumption of the surplus energy created by the huge Wilson dam generators.

Lawrence Fly, general solicitor for TVA, has conducted negotiations with Commonwealth & Southern officials in New York for several weeks. Today he advised TVA general headquarters here that the deed to the property actually had been delivered and that TVA's check had been turned over to the power company.

Also involved in the deal, Fly said, is complete acquisition of rights to the Wheeler Dam site, another huge unit in the multi-million-dollar TVA spiderweb.

Baptists Study Reorganization Here Tuesday

Under New Constitution, Sect Would Co-operate With North, South.

Consideration of a new constitution whereby the work of the Baptist denomination in Washington and adjacent territory would be reorganized will be the outstanding feature of the fifty-ninth annual meeting of the Columbia Association of Baptist Churches Tuesday and Wednesday in the Fifth Baptist Church.

The proposed constitution provides that the name of the organization shall be "The District of Columbia Convention of Baptist Churches," its object being "to elicit, combine and direct the energies of the Baptist denomination, within and adjacent to the District of Columbia" in evengelistical, missionary, educational and benevolent work.

It is to co-operate with the Northern and the Southern Baptist conventions; and "to promote harmony of feeling and concert of action on the part of all the Baptists throughout the nation." Closer fellowship and a more effective co-operation among the churches here is to be secured through "the maintenance of a central agency or headquarters." The report on the new constitution will be presented at the opening session Tuesday morning by E. Hilton Jackson, chairman of the committee which has been working on the project for a year past.

Various other reports will be made at the Tuesday morning and afternoon sessions, with an address in the evening by Dr. Wade Bryant, of the Barton Heights Baptist Church, Richmond, Va.; and a sermon by the Rev. Christian Science Topic Announced

"Everlasting Punishment" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Isaiah 48-22: "There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked." Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible:

"And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night." (Revelation 12:10).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "A louder song, sweeter than has ever before reached high heaven, now rises clearer and nearer to the great heart of Christ; for the accuser is not there, and Love sends forth her primal and everlasting strain."

How a Baby GROWS

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

Afternoon Tea Is Given By Senora de Recinos

Capital Society Attends Affair at Guatemalan Legation; Guests Admire Murals Depicting Tropical Scenes.

By Francesca McKenney.

Late yesterday afternoon members of Capital society made their way through the heavy traffic to the Guatemalan Legation to attend the tea given by Senora de Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala.

Senora de Recinos, who received her guests at the head of the winding staircase, wore an afternoon gown of black chiffon printed with large mauve and deep pink flowers with a bunch of flowers of the same shade at the V-shaped neck. The Minister was busy making certain their guests had refreshments.

The tea table in the dining room was decorated with a large silver bowl of talisman roses, iris and jonquils and was laden with sandwiches, small strawberry tarts and miniature eclairs. Tea was served at one end and ices at the other, while those who preferred coffee found the silver coffee urn on the buffet. Punch and highballs were served in the library.

Guests stopped to admire the mural around the dining room above the three-quarter oak paneling. The mural, done by a Guatemalan artist, comprises scenes of various sections of the country, the desert, with its cactus; the dense foliage of the tropics bordering a wide river; the semitropical coast line with its flat country and palm trees; an old monastery in ruins and, over the mantel, a view overlooking the capital of Guatemala from the mountains about 5,000 feet above, before the earthquake. The entire mural is done with shades of blue predominating, showing the lighting at the end of the day when twilight casts blue haze on Guatemala.

Among those who arrived early yesterday afternoon were the Ambassador of Peru, Senor Don Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the Ambassador of Chile, Senor Manuel Trucco, who was accompanied by his three daughters, Senoritas Marta, Graciela and Rebeca; Senora de Alfaro, wife of the Minister of Panama; the Minister of Bolivia and Senora de Finot; Senorita Olga Patterson, daughter of the Ambassador of Cuba; the First Secretary of the Mexican Embassy, Senor Dr. Don Rafael Fuentes, and the Counselor of the Czechoslovakian Legation, Dr. Josef Nemecek.

Assisting the hosts at the tea table were Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Senora de Alfaro, Mme. De Bayle, Mme. Chevalier, Mme. Lopez-Herrarte, Mrs. Parker West and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas.

Also there were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Owsley, Mrs. Robert W. Imbrie, Mrs. Peyton Gordon, Baroness von Pagenhardt, Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton, who was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Stellita Stapleton, and Miss Patricia Mencia. Mrs. Edgar Snow was chatting with friends, as was Mrs. Charles Drake, Miss Lolita Dawson and Lieut. Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim.

The hostess wore a Molynaux costume of gown of navy blue Marquisette with full three-quarter sleeves and beading in grape design in shades of orchid. Her large navy blue hat of crystal straw carried out the same bead design.

Guests were received in the patio, which was banked with palms and pink snapdragons. The luncheon table in the Carlton room was decorated in white with roses, snapdragons and lilacs in mirror containers with green smilax interspersed. Silver candelabra with green candles and May baskets of spun sugar as candy containers carried out the same colors.

Women Urged to Record Day-to-Day Story of Life

By Hope Ridings Miller.

DIARIES, like old trunks in the attic and horsehair sofas in the parlor, definitely belong the lavender-and-old-lace era. Most modern women are too busy attending club meetings, looking after their homes or listening to lectures to write down day-by-day happenings for posterity or even their own amusement.

"Yet every person, whose life in any respect escapes the commonplace, should keep a diary, says Ethel Armes, research consultant and author, whose latest published work is based on the life of a lady who did—Nancy Shippen.

Even the woman whose life runs in a rut would profit by recording her experiences, Miss Armes believes. "Seeing what happens to her in her own handwriting might prompt her to make her existence less monotonous, to launch out and meet more interesting persons, or at least to develop her imaginative powers by indulging in flights of fancy with her pen."

Diary Is Record Of Life.

Miss Armes pointed out that what any woman writes in a personal journal may one day serve as a record of her own life and as a mirror of her times. Take Nancy Shippen, for example. But for her diary she would probably be remembered merely as a descendent of the famous Lee family and a cousin of the glamorous Peggy Shippen, wife of Benedict Arnold. But since her diary has been included in a recently published book, this lady of long ago has emerged from oblivion as one of the charmers of her day, as a Colonial belle who had many suitors, had, in fact, "at one time, a husband, a lover and a beau, yet did not transgress, by so much as a hair's breadth, the moral standards of her day."

Furthermore, Miss Armes learned in perusing the pages of this singular woman's personal journal that the man who remained her "lover" even after she married Col. Livingston, is to be regarded according to the Eighteenth Century meaning of the word—"one who worships from afar."

Found Material by Accident

Yesterday Miss Armes told how she happened to find the documents she later worked into the volume.

As she talked, it was obvious this soft-voiced woman of modest mein was, in reality, a detective; and had done a good deal of sleuthing in connection with her latest book. She admitted "the finding of Nancy's journal and some of her letters was only the beginning" of a long period of delving into musty files to search for material about the beauty and belle of old Philadelphia.

Before that, Miss Armes had been focusing her historical sleuthing on another, and more famous, figure. In 1928 she conceived the idea for the purchase of Stanford Hall as a national shrine and a typical Colonial plantation of the early Eighteenth Century. Conducting researches for the restoration work, she directed the national publicity and was one of the five incorporators of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, Inc. Later, she was appointed to conduct the Strafford researches for the Garvin Institute of Yale.

MISS ETHEL ARMES.

"It was while I was on the trail of the Lee material that I found Nancy Shippen's journal buried in the boxes of the storerooms of Dr. Lloyd Shippen's house here in Washington," she said. "Before that, I knew little about the belle except that she was the daughter of Alice Lee of Stratford and Dr. William Shippen of Philadelphia, director-general of Military hospitals in the Continental Army."

Identifying persons mentioned in the diary by names other than their own was a difficult task, she said, as was, also, the problem of discovering the Shippen home in Philadelphia and the site of the French legation, just a few squares from where Nancy lived.

In that legation lived the man who made the belle's story an international romance. Though Nancy speaks of him throughout her account as "Leander," Miss Armes discovered through exhaustive research that he was Louis Guillaume Otto, Comte de Mosloy, Charge d'Affaires of the French Legation in Philadelphia during the closing years of the American Revolution.

If the lady to whom Monsieur Otto paid court were living today, she could probably give Miss 1936 some important pointers on charm, Miss Armes believes. Why? "Because, judging from her diary, she was witty, spirited and a talented musician (she played the harpsichord, while Otto sang) and modest and helpless enough to appeal to the typical manly man of her time. Furthermore, her portraits prove she was as lovely to look at. Yes, even today, Nancy would probably be a heart-breaker," said her historian.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

It Seems to Be Only Natural for Mothers to Dream Dreams of Their Daughters' Making Brilliant Marriages.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young fellow 22 years old and I am very fond of a young lady who is 21 years of age. But her mother is trying very hard to stop us from going together. Still, she claims she has nothing against me, so I can not understand why she would want to break up our friendship. I go to church with them every Sunday morning and night. My girl friend sings in the choir and so do I. I only see her on my nights off and they are very few. My working hours are from 3 o'clock in the afternoon until 11 o'clock at night.

Mary Haworth

• • • •

If we go out we always have to take one of her girl friends with us; but these friends always ask up to drop them off and come back for them later. However, I do not think that would be right, after her mother sent them with us. Please, Miss Haworth, help me with my problem. Yours very truly, W. H. W.

Average Mother Sees Daughter As Remarkable.

DEAR W. H. W.: There is little if any help a third person removed from the scene can give you in this situation. If you hope to win the girl, it is up to you to convince her beyond the shadow of a doubt that you are her Heaven-sent mate, and to convince her so thoroughly that even her mother can not change her mind on that score. The mother may be trying to break up your friendship with her daughter for no other reason than that she believes you will never make a very great financial success of your life. It seems to be only natural for mothers to dream dreams of their daughters' making brilliant marriages; of marrying men who can support them in style and provide them with material ease and social distinction.

• • • •

The average mother looks upon her average daughter as an entirely remarkable creature, deserving of an destined for the best; and very often mothers seek through their daughters to realize social ambitions which they were never able to attain of and for themselves. Mothers who have known what it is to skimp and scheme and budget to provide their families with the necessities of life, such as food, clothing, shelter, education and some opportunity for social advancement ache with a desire to spare their daughters these petty trials and deprivations. They aspire to see their children and their children's children projected upward and onward into a sphere of more gracious living than they themselves have ever known. And to such mothers, the immediate way of achieving this goal is through their daughters' making marriages with professionally and financially successful men.

On the other hand, it is possible of course, that this mother's one unselfish desire is to see her daughter marry the man who can make her happy. And she may believe that the love which exists between you two is simply the outgrowth of propinquity; that her daughter is interested in you only because you are the only steady beau she has ever had; and she may want her daughter to have the opportunity of knowing more men before settling down to marriage, so that when she does choose a husband, she can be relatively sure she has made a fitting final choice.

• • • •

From what you tell me of your job—details of which I have omitted here—it appears unlikely you could support a wife on your present earnings. And since you are so young and the girl even younger, one can readily see why any sensible-minded parent might justifiably frown down your mutual inclination to slide into a quasi-engagement or so-called understanding based on wishful thinking rather than any more substantial premise. After all, ask yourself this: What have you got to offer the girl besides love? Can you support her? Have you any reason to believe you will be in a position to make a home for her, with any guarantee of economic security for herself and possible children, at any time within the next two or three years? If you are not in a position to make modestly financed marriage possible, you are not in a position to lay claim to the girl's serious consideration....

• • • •

The most you can do, under such circumstnces, is to accept your love for the girl as a challenge to increase your earning powers; and in the meantime, leave her free to see as much of other men as she sees of you. It might be a good idea to have a serious, frank talk with the mother and tell her exactly how you feel about her danghter, what your future prospects are, and see if you cannot win her over to a more sympathetic and encouraging attitude toward your suit. she may, of course, tell you that she cannot accept you as a serious suitor for her daughter's hand until you are older and financially more successful. And if that should be her attitude, and you have no ammunition with which to bombard her out of that point of view, the sensible thing to do may be to stop seeing the girl.

Teaching Child To Be Popular Is Boomerang

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

The child who is taught to court popularity, generally fails of his purpose. He becomes self-conscious and shy or boisterous and aggressive. To tell a youngster that if he wants to be liked he must do certain things—such as be generous with his belongings, always yield, not talk about himself, invite other children to his house, is quite useless. If he is not spontaneous in his attitude toward others he never will find it easy to make a place for himself, and probably always will remain the outsider. Baldly stated, it seems harsh, but that's the way life is.

This is true not only of children. There are many adults who, in spite of their best efforts to make themselves liked, are distrusted and excluded from real intimacy with others because their altruism and cordiality are recognized as a pose, consciously assumed for the purpose of attracting others.

One child may fight at the drop of a hat, be selfish and overbearing, and yet be accepted and well-liked, where another child may be submissive and open-handed and make no headway.

The secret of popularity is ability to like other people genuinely, and liking them, to understand them. It is the natural outcome of years of unconscious practice in getting along with all kinds of people under various conditions.

Nothing parents can say can really help a child to make the equation with his fellows. If, from the outset, they throw the child with all kinds of people and let him make his own way, refusing to listen to his complaints or criticisms or even to comment upon them, they are far more likely to have a popular child than if, from their own experience, they try to give him "hints for getting along."

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Perfumes for Sports and for Dinner Wear Are Told About.

By Mignon.

The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, endorse or manufacture any cosmetics.

IT IS NEARING the golf season and you out-of-door women who spend most of the summer at country clubs, motoring and enjoying other out-of-door fun will be interested in a new perfume I have for you. It is distinctly the out-door kind of thing with a smell like very fine leather. I heard of it several years ago before it got a good start on the markets in this country. Today, you can get it in almost every place where this manufacturer's things are sold.

There is no question about it, a dainty little flower perfume does not go with tweeds and knock-about clothes. Very feminine perfumes made to wear with organdies are distinctly out of place for sports wear. It is like trying to match in a golf game, a girl in knickers and a girl in a pale blue organdy with pink ribbons. One of them should not be on the course.

I tried a year ago to find this perfume about which a Frenchman told me, and only in the last month did I run across it.

Another thing—when you go homeand get ready for a dinner party in the evening—one of the newest and very loveliest of perfumes that you can use has just made its successful appearance. It comes in bottles like Greek columns made in clear crystal. Of course it isn't cheap, very few good perfumes are, but you are not expected to bathe in perfume, and you can buy this by the dram and use very little at a time. My guess is that you will go back and buy it in a larger bottle later, because it is cheaper that way and its quality is certainly unquestioned.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column, telephone The Washington Post, National 4200, Branch 323.

'Peasant' Sleeves.

Sleeves derived from ancient peasant shirts are much in evidence. Such sleeves form tiny plaits on the shoulders and open up toward the wrist where they fasten by narrow ribbons.

Appliques for Trimming.

Appliques provide a delicate type of trimming and eyelet embroideries also are noted for their feminine effect. They are both used widely by Parisian designers.

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

CHAPTER XXVII

THE CAR that Jerry Dayton drove was a powerful roadster. Almost new, it was in the pink of condition and just had been serviced with gas and oil.

Bradley's good humor was rising. "The only thing that worries me is that this car will be recognized."

Clara disagreed. "There are a thousand like it in every state."

"What do you mean, we'll take no chances?"

Joseph Bradley grunted, sarcastically. "Exactly what I said. Let us get well into Iowa and we'll connect with another car by hook or crook. This car's conspicuous enough in Illinois. But in Iowa, with an Illinois license it would be just too bad."

Clara Bradley began to cry, hysterically.

"I'd rather be dead than this," she wailed. "Now if this means we're going to be broke the rest of our lives, dodging around to keep out of the way of police, Joe Bradley, if it means that, I'd just as soon we'd be caught right away."

But Joseph Bradley grew more triumphant as they swept along. "Worry if you want to, but do it quietly. You notice I'm not doing much grieving."

"And yet you know we've lost everything."

"Ever know when anybody else got the best of me—that is, absolutely the best of me?"

"Well, then, stop sniffling, and depend on me. I'll get you out of here and we won't be penniless, either."

"Joe—you mean——you mean—," his wife was almost breathless with excitement.

"I mean that I didn't have free rein with Jim's account for two weeks for nothing. We'll be far from penniless, even if we do have to hide away for the rest of our lives. Now shut up and leave things to me. We aren't safely away, yet, you know."

'Take It Easy.'

They drove through the night. At 12 Joseph Bradley directed Jerry to swing into a gasoline station after telling him that if he moved, he could expect the worst to happen.

As the station attendant filled the gas tank, looked at the oil and serviced the car with water, Jerry could feel the barrel of Joseph Bradley's revolver jabbed into his ribs, held secreted under Bradley's coat.

"Take it easy," Joseph said once. "If you behave yourself, there's a chance of your getting out of this alive. But once dead, my dear fellow, a fellow is a long time dead."

At the outskirts of the next village Joseph directed that the car be stopped. He gave Clara the gun. "Give the kid the works if he so much as moves," he directed, "I'll be back in 10 minutes."

He was back in 10 minutes. He grinned with satisfaction as he tossed a pair of car licenses down on the floor of the car. "Once we get out of this blooming place we'll put those on and ditch ours."

The next 36 hours were torture to Jerry. They drove almost continuously, night and day. At times they stopped on a side road for Jerry to sleep and he always fell asleep almost before he had set the brake on the car.

When they awakened him Bradley would tell Jerry he had slept two or three, even four hours, as the case might be.

He knew that in these hours of waking he had driven through the entire State of Iowa. Then Nebraska. Always by hook or crook, Joseph Bradley managed to get the licenses for the particular State they drove through.

Clara was tired, nervous and fretful. "I just can't go on," she said time and again, "I feel exactly as though these clothes were glued to me. It has been two days now since I've had them off. And Joe, I just can't wash in these oil-station rest rooms. I can't get my face clean. And I'm sleepy."

"You sleep," Joseph Bradley was neither tender nor kind. "You get your share of sleeping. You slept all the way through Nebraska."

"But I feel as though I could sleep 30 days and 30 nights without ever opening my eyes."

Joseph Bradley laughed in triumphant sarcasm. "Well, you'll have plenty of opportunity where we're going. I'll bet the Chicago papers are simply running over with this. We'll have to lie low. Maybe for months."

Clara Bradley made quick, nervous use of her handkerchief. "And you aren't just bragging that you're well heeled for it? You've got a little salted away?"

"Don't worry. I had Jim sign a check to pay the servants and I cleaned out his account. I've got a roll big enough to choke a whole herd of cows.

To Denver.

"Where are you going?"

"Denver?"

"Yes."

"Right back to the apartment?"

"Naturally not. That would be the first place they'd look for us."

"Then where?"

"You know perfectly well, Clara, without my telling."

"Joe, I won't go there. I just won't go there," she told him at last emphatically. "I won't be buried in that God forsaken mountain cabin where there isn't a living soul for miles around. I just won't."

Joseph Bradley was not sympathetic. "All right, then, if you won't, you just won't and there isn't any more to say or do about it. You can stop off anywhere. I'm going, because it's just darned good sense.

"And as far as being out of the way and desolate and deserted, well, I chose it because it is every one of those things, I was thinking of just that when I bought the place.

"We'll be away from everything. You talk about sleep. Huh. I'm so sleepy that I think I can sleep a year. And I never want to look a quick lunch in the face again."

Jerry ventured a question, "What are you going to do with me?"

"I don't know," Joseph Bradley's face was dark with anger. "I don't know. We need you and yet I'd like to get rid of you."

"We'll need him plenty at the cabin," Clara ventured.

"Such a good servant," Joseph Bradley sneered. "Didn't you brag you could do everything? Well, you'll likely have your chance to do everything at the cabin. Maybe it wasn't such a bad idea, Clara, bringing a servant along."

"Time will tell." In a measure Clara was regaining her own good humor. Joe did think ahead a long way. She had laughed him to scorn when he bought and equipped that tiny little place away up in the mountains. It could be reached for the last few miles or so only by a pack trail.

Half dozing as she rode, Clara reviewed their situation. The plan had seemed so simple at first. Just to have Pascoe bump Jim off in an accidental fashion. Pascoe was an eager accomplice. A kidnaper, a killer, he fitted perfectly the part they chose for him to play. Jim's death would be an accident, pure and simple. His uncle and aunt would be summoned from their home in Denver. They would be declared executors of Jim's estate and the entire Bradley fortune would be in their control.

Yes, it had seemed a perfect plan. How could they know that Pascoe would fail?

And how could they know that just when they needed her, had to have her, in fact, if only for appearances' sake, that June would run away?

Next Error

And having gotten there, and sensed the situation, the next error was to let any grass grow under their feet in completing the job.

There again they had listened to Pascoe. Joseph Bradley had been all for hurrying the job. With Jim Bradley so desperately injured his death might be momentarily expected Pascoe disagreed. There had been, of course, the trouble with the first doctor and his nurses. A death coming so quickly on the heels of such a disagreement would be suspicious.

And so the "sure fire" plan had failed in all its ramifications.

Joseph and Clara Bradley were not prepared, however, when, finishing the last three miles of their journey on foot, they came close to the cabin and saw the door open.

Poor Speech Rates You

PRONUNCIATION, the one sure sign that rates you, in spite of smart clothes, good looks, or a desire to be sociable!

Arleen is finding out this bitter truth, as she stumbles along, trying to be affable to Phyllis and her mother, but sounding more and more like a cheap little nobody.

"Aren't these exKWIZit bruzZEERS?" she exclaims, as they stop near a display of brassiers in a department store. And don't these quinTOOPlet dolls look misCHEEVyus!"

Then as she notices the social atmosphere is a bit chilly, she suggests, "Let's go to the tearoom for a carmul sundae with PEEcans."

Arleen, your pronunciation is giving Phyllis and her mother the shivers, and they're not snobs, either. Not much excuse, these days, for mispronouncing EXquisite, brahs-YAIR, QUINtuplet, MISchievous, CAREamel, and peCAN.

Lack of education is really no excuse. Check up on a few words every day, weed out those you say wrong, practice on the right pronunciation. In a year's time you can root out hundreds of errors, speak like a person of refinement, not like the careless crowd. It's only natural for strangers to take you for whatever your tongue says you are!

Our 40-page booklet, "Words Most Often Mispronounced," sets you right, clearly and simply, on errors we may all make. A short-cut to good speech—and to that "sure" feeling.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Words Most Often Mispronounced," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Jellied Salads and Tulips a Salute to Spring

Yellow tulips in a bowl, flanked with old-fashioned stock the color of new milk—a row of Southern gardens' first tomatoes, new spring greens, and a lemon mold quivering with its own springtime jollity! These are the components of a springtime poem—set to the music of a simple background of linen.

Lemon Salmon Mold Provides Salad in Tune With the Season

Delightful in Flavor, Colorful as Spring, and Possessing High Food Values, Festive Dish Enough to Make Any Party a Success.

WHAT COMBINATION could be more eloquent of the mood of early spring—more in tune with the times and the tastes of May dinners—than the table pictured above? Tulips and stock nod a graceful greeting to the lemon salmon mold that quivers amid its border of crisp greens and ripe tomato slices topped with chopped, hard-cooked egg white.

Salads are blooming on tables everywhere this season as never before—the very sign and symbol that spring, which was so long on the way, is here at last. She never had a more royal welcome.

The combination of an unusual salmon mold with fresh garden vegetables is a particularly happy choice for a luncheon party, a family dinner, or a bridge supper. It combines flavors which are highly complementary—colors which are gay as the season—and a wealth of high food values which belie the frivolous and light-hearted appearance of the salad itself.

Any sort of mold may be used to make this charming, distinctly flavored salad. A round mold, perhaps, fits in most happily with the spring garden arrangement which surrounds it in finished form. Deep trays of your electric refrigerator, however, may be used just as well if you prefer to have your salad in an oblong or loaf shape.

To prepare the lemon salad mold: In a cold damp mold place one pound of flaked canned salmon. Dissolve one package of lemon, or lime-flavored gelatin, in one cup of boiling water. Add one cup of cold water and one tablespoon of lemon juice. Pour gelatin over the salmon and place in electric refrigerator until set. Unmold on crisp salad greens and garnish with sliced tomatoes topped with salad dressing and chopped hard-cooked egg whites. Served with crisp crackers and coffee this festive salad is quite enough to make any spring party a success.

Unique Buttons Add Bright Touch

Paris—Many striking ideas are being developed in the button line. For sport blouses, a clever manufacturer uses numbers to replace ordinary buttons down the front. These, ranging from one to nine, are of plastic material, sometimes in bright color to form a contrasting effect against the blouse fabric or else in imitation ivory, tortoise shell or delicate, pale amber.

The signs of the Zodiac also have been a source of inspiration for button designers and have been used with great originality by leading dressmakers for summer afternoon or beach dresses. The Chinese inspiration has been responsible for one style showing Chinese script engraved over mother-of-pearl discs or plastic plaquettes in lacquer red.

Allspice Tree Fruit Indigenous to Jamaica

Many housewives who have used allspice in their cakes and puddings are under the impression that it is a mixture of several spices, but in reality it is the tiny fruit of a tree which grows in profusion on the Island of Jamaica. Its aroma suggests a blend of spices—hence its name.

The tree bears abundant annual crops. Often as much as 150 pounds of allspice berries are gathered from a single tree. About one-third of the crop is imported by the United States and ultimately finds its way into delectable foods.

Mrs. Nye Has Pet Recipe for Chocolate Cake Sure to Please.

By Pattie Ellicott.

"Cut yourself a piece of chocolate cake" is one of the most pleasant suggestions that Senator Gerald P. Nye, the militant fighter against munitions and militarists, can hear, especially when the cake has been made by the pet recipe of Mrs. Nye.

MRS. NYE.

Guests at the Nye home are most enthusiastic, too, about the chocolate cake often served there with the sweets course. As a matter of fact, chocolate cake is an almost universal favorite with men in that particular food line just as chocolate ice cream soda is their choice nine times out of ten.

There are many, many ways of making chocolate cake, of course. Since ice box cookery has come into favor many housewives are serving Chocolate Ice Box Cake.

Chocolate Ice Box Cake.

2 dozen macaroons
4 eggs
2 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons cold milk
1 teaspoon vanilla.

Break chocolate in small pieces, add sugar and milk, put over slow fire, stir until chocolate is dissolved and mixture perfectly smooth. Set pan in warm (not hot) water until needed.

Ham Loaf Recipe With Horseradish

Wednesday's food page carried a picture of ham loaf with horseradish dressing, but in the final edition the recipe was omitted. There have been so many requests for this recipe that it is printed today.

Ham Loaf.

1 pound lean smoked ham, ground
¾ pound lean pork, ground
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon paprika
2 cups milk
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon minced onion
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
½ cup quick cooking tapioca

Combine ingredients in the order given. Pour into a loaf pan and bake one hour in a slow oven (275 degress F.), or until done. Serve hot or cold with horseradish dressing. Serves 8.

Horseradish Dressing.

2 tablespoons drained horseradish
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 cup whipping cream

Eggs for Meat Loaf.

Hard cooked eggs may be molded in the center of a meat loaf to give the slices a decorative effect. Meat loaf prepared this way is especially attractive when sliced cold, as it makes a colorful addition to the platter which holds an array of warm-weather cold cuts.

Lace Dresses Tops At Paris Showings

Paris—Lace dresses continue to be tops. They're shown in amazing variety and startling numbers by all the leading designers. To emphasize the importance of this material in the feminine costume, a ball was held recently at the Hotel George V at which only lace dresses were worn. Dull albene laces were much in evidence, particularly in dark shades such as midnight blue, purplish blue, greenat, eggplant and a dark tone of tortoise shell brown.

Mirrors Give Space Illusion To Tiny Rooms

Large Windows Also Create Effect of Spaciousness in Model Exhibit.

NOVEL use of mirrors and large windows to give the illusion of greater space, the use of blocks and dishes to provide color notes and new combinations of high colors in furniture coverings, are interesting features of the ten miniature living rooms which have been designed and constructed by the first-year architectural students in the Cooper Union Day Art School.

The ten best designs from the group submitted were worked out and the models will be publicly exhibited in the annual exhibition of students' work in May.

Not only is each room original in shape and design, but each piece of furniture, constructed and upholstered by the students, is also an original creation, some being based on old forms, and others on modern lines.

The rooms are about three feet high and five or six feet wide. The scale of one inch to three feet was used in the interiors, so that tables and desks are less than four inches high, and clocks and accessories, though complete in every detail, are less than an inch high.

The project constitutes a new method of teaching architecture, according to Mr. Esmond Shaw, assistant director of the art schools.

It is interesting to note that 60 per cent of the students who built these model rooms are girls, which proves that the future homes of America will be more livable, more attractive, and more practical from the women's standpoint.

Outstanding among the rooms is one paneled horizontally in light pine. The panels are wide, allowing five between floor and ceiling with recesses between each painted dark room. This type of paneling is in existence in one of the oldest houses in the United States, located in Bedham, Mass., according to Mr. Shaw. The old paneling, however, is narrow and overlapped in the "ship-lap" style. An outward curved floor-to-ceiling window, an extension of the traditional bay-window, constitutes one entire side of the room.

A large fireplace, above which is a mirror reaching to the ceiling, and built-in bookcases, form another side of the room. The remaining two walls are paneled. The furniture color scheme is dark brown and beige to harmonize with the wood. Near the fireplace is a modern version of the love seat, upholstered in brown. One end curves to form an arm. The other end, however, is formed by a separate pine bookcase. A full-sized brown rug covers the floor, with a leopard skin thrown over it in front of the fireplace. On the mantel is a clock, hardly an inch high.

A sharp contrast is presented in another of the rooms, labeled "early American." A three-section bay-window on the south, a fireplace between built-in bookcases on the west, two single windows on the North, and a plain wall on the east constitute the plan. This room is papered in an original hand-painted design in which the predominating color is an apple green. The tiny furniture includes a butterfly table in "maple," two chairs based on the Windsor style, a sofa upholstered in green figured chintz, and a grandfather's clock. Hand-made brass dishes and an old-fashioned clock adorn the white painted mantel, while on the walls hang four miniature framed silhouettes. The curtains are of dotted swiss in tie-back style.

Terry cloth wool rep and monk's cloth were used in most of the rooms as a furniture covering. Celanese was the most popular curtain material. The rooms are complete in every respect, even to minute editions of popular mazazines and little table lamps which actually light.

Tuna Fish Recipes Wanted for Contest

Every wise housewife keeps a can or two of tuna fish on her emergency pantry shelf during the winter. But now that warm weather has visited the city, tuna fish will play a more prominent role on the menu, for it lends itself so well to delicious hot weather dishes—salads, tender souffles, creamed or a la king dishes to be served in toast cases, etc.

The very timeliness of tuna fish is reason enough that it should have been selected as the subject for next week's Post recipe contest. So when you are dusting off your file of summer recipes, draw out all those under the head of tuna, and send your favorite one to Dorothy Duncan in care of The Washington Post.

Cash awards will be given to the five women entering the most outstanding recipes. The first prize will be $5; the second, $3, and the remaining three, $1 each.

All recipes will be judged for awards next Saturday morning, so be sure to mail your entry in time to reach this office by that time.

Salad Bowl Is an Emblem Of Hospitality

Although a comparative newcomer to the household, the salad bowl already is an emblem of American hospitality. Generous of size as a rule, and filled with attractively arranged and appetizing combinations of fruits or vegetables, it bids fair to make a place for itself in the American tradition of hospitality similar to that achieved by the samovar in Russia.

Wooden salad bowls are the most popular here and whether yours is made of fine, matched woods or roughly hewn of cheaper material, it must be treated according to the traditions established for it. First, rub the bowl on the inside with a little real mayonnaise. Then, for flavor, rub a tiny piece of garlic around its inner surface. The bowl must never be washed. Instead, wipe it thoroughly with a dry towel.

And now that the bowl is ready, you will want some suggestions as to what to put into it. Here are two ideas:

Orange Salad.

Line the salad bowl with crisp lettuce. Alternately arrange orange slices and raw onion slices on it. Serve with appetizer mayonnaise.

Appetizer Mayonnaise.

Clove of garlic
1-3 cup mayonnaise
2-3 cup French dressing

Rub the bowl in which dressing is to be mixed with cut side of clove of garlic. Slowly add French dressing to mayonnaise, beating constantly. Makes one cup of mayonnaise.

Mixed Vegetable Salad Bowl.

1 cup cucumber
1 cup sliced onion
1 cup grated carrots
1 stalk endive
1 cup shredded cabbage
Mayonnaise
Roquefort mayonnaise

Roquefort Mayonnaise.

1 cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons Roquefort cheese
1 teaspoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt

Blend all ingredients together thoroughly. Makes one cup mayonnaise.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"My husband is an ex-football hero, an ex-best-dancer-in-town and ex-very-eligible-bachelor. You'd never know it now, though. He wants to sit at home every night with his paper and radio—then on Saturdays and Sundays, he always has some gardening or some puttering around the house to do. Of course, I feel quite cocky that he's so satisfied at home . . . not so cocky that I don't feel that I should look to my laurels and try to keep things so that he will always like it best at home.

"I'm thinking especially about an easy chair for him. The one he generally sits in now looks a little small for him, I think, and I'm planning to get a new one . . . We need an extra chair in our living room, anyway. What color would you suggest? The room has jade green walls, a rust textural carpet, draperies in shades of beige, brown and green, one easy chair in a mixture that is more of a flame color than anything else and another in yellow. The lamps are in copper and the furniture is walnut."

The lady who told us this was a brown-eyed little pixie of a person . . . it was easy to see what a man would see in her. That room would be becoming to her. For the extra new chair, we suggested brown leather in a man size . . . . and why not let the man in the case take a sit before hand to see if it fits?

Girl Graduates Now Find Jobs Easier to Land

Girls who leave college in June with diplomas in hand will have a better chance to get a job than their forerunners who were graduated in the past five years, judging from a recent statement of Robert F. Moore, secretary of appointments at Columbia University.

Disclosing the latest employment percentages of the university, Mr. Moore pointed out, "Four times as many recruiting representatives from large firms are interviewing prospective graduates than they were last year. Organizations that laid off large numbers of employes, many of whom have been absorbed in other positions and in Government jobs, are seeking to rebuild personnels from the bottom, taking on young college graduates rather than rehiring former employes."

Fields allied with distribution are the most active, he further explained. "With resumption of buying, sales forces are being entirely revamped," he continued. "This explains why companies representing all branches of industry and business are resuming their recruiting activities in the college field after a lapse of several years."

But while sales jobs, which can be filled by women as well as men—are increasing in number, feminine workers' former stnad-by, the secretarial positions, is becoming as much man's province as woman's.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Varicose Veins.

Superficial veins—those that lie immediately beneath the skin—have a tendency to enlarge or, as we say, become varicosed. There are many causes, such as interference with the return flow of blood from the extremities, occupations that require the maintenance of an erect posture for many hours each day, and any condition that brings on a weakening of the walls of the veins themselves. At any rate, varicose veins do occur, sometimes in young persons, but usually in those approaching or past middle life. They are unsightly and are often responsible for swelling of the feet and legs.

Many years ago Chassaignac, a French physician, suggested that weakened veins could be obliterated through the injection of some caustic liquid. Although the solution proposed (perchloride of iron) was found to be too irritating, a search was begun for some substance that would not cause inflammation, but would bring about destruction of the veins as blood-carrying tubes.

It was thought that the return circulation from the extremities (legs) could be handled easily by the deep vessels. In spite of numerous failures the quest for a suitable solution continued, and iodine, tannic acid, ethyl alcohol, mercury, and sodium salicylate were used. This latter solution, suggested by J. A. Sicard in 1916, was found—much to his surprise—to produce a satisfactory effect, although each dose was accompanied by severe cramping of the muscles of the legs.

Later (1931) McPheeters demonstrated that a 20 per cent solution of common salt would bring about the desired result. Experiments continued with the development of one solution after another, many of which were reasonably successful. A widely used plan today employs a 5 per cent solution of sodium morrhuate with quinine hydrochloride and urethane.

Before the program of injection is inaugurated, the physician must make certain that the deep veins are adequate to return the blood to the heart and that there is no inflammation in those that are varicosed. The skin over the vessel is sterilized and a small dose of the drug is used to determine a possible sensitivity. After a time, if no obvious reaction has appeared, the injection is made with the patient in a sitting position.

The foot is then elevated so that it will be slightly higher than the hip. This position is maintained for an hour or so. From two to five days are allowed to elapse after which the patient is carefully examined and the extent of the clot produced by the injection determined.

WHAT YOU EAT HAS A LOT TO DO WITH HOW YOU FEEL

Correction of Constipation* Is Often a Matter of Menus

For years, the medical profession has insisted that proper diet is more effective in promoting health than the indiscriminate use of patent medicines. Today, they are seeing their teachings bear fruit.

For instance, millions of families have learned that common constipation is largely due to insufficient "bulk" in meals. Many of them correct this condition by the regular use of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN.

This delicious cereal supplies generous "bulk" in effective form. Within the body, its "bulk" absorbs moisture, and forms a soft mass. Gently this clears out the intestinal wastes.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN also supplies vitamin B and contains iron. It may be served as a cereal with milk or cream, or cooked into tempting muffins, breads, etc.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Stubborn cases may require ALL-BRAN oftener. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is not a "cure-all"—but it does correct common constipation.* It is guaranteed by the Kellogg Company. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Reaguer Guilty; Given 20 Years In Girl's Death

Undertaker Displays No Emotion When Verdict Is Announced.

William H. Reaguer, the 57-year-old Culpeper, Va., undertaker, must serve from 20 years to the rest of his life in the penitentiary for the penknife murder of Willie Mae Wood.

The business leader and father of two married daughters was convicted of second-degree murder by a jury of 12 men in Justice Oscar Luhring's Criminal Court yesterday after deliberation of 9 hours and 16 minutes.

The venire yesterday brought in the verdict. The men who decided Reaguer's fate got the case at 2:56 p. m. the day before and, unable to reach a decision, were locked up for the night.

There will be no appeal, Chief Defense Counsel James A. O'Shea said. Sentence probably will be imposed by Justice Luhring next Friday.

Word that the jury was ready to report spread rapidly through the District Supreme Court Building yesterday morning.

Spectators who had loitered in the halls joined the throngs of curious who once more jammed the little courtroom as they had during the nine days of the trial.

Reaguer was ushered into the presence of Justice Luhring, and sat for a moment in the chair back of his attorneys, the chair he has occupied while they fought the battle for his life—a legal engagement in which their chief plea was insanity.

When Reaguer heard the sentence, he did not show the signs of emotion he had throughout the trial.

"What did they say?" he whispered into the ears of his attorneys.

The verdict was repeated.

"All right," grunted the man who all but decapitated Mrs. Wood, the bride of but 17 days, in the Houston Hotel just before dawn October 12, 1935.

None of Reaguer's family was in court when the verdict was returned.

Willie Mae Wood, who had known Reaguer since she was 16, was 21 at the time she took her death ride through the rain with the undertaker and her cousin, Miss Annie T. O'Bannon.

During the lengthy trial the Government was represented by Assistant United States Attorneys Irvin Goldstein and Cecil Heflin and Reaguer by James A. O'Shea, Burnette Miller and Alfred Goldstein.

Little Asks $65,000 For Crash Injuries

Lieut. George M. Little, head of the Police Department vice squad, and nemesis of Washington racketeers, yesterday in the District Supreme Court, filed suit for $65,000 damages from James J. Lewis, 100 B street northeast, alleged driver of an automobile that crashed against Little's car in the Mount Vernon highway last September, seriously injuring Little and his wife, Mrs. Lillian Little.

The suit, brought in three separate actions, asked for $30,000 for Little's injuries; $25,000 for those suffered by his wife, and $10,000 for the loss of Mrs. Little's domestic services.

According to the suits, the car driven by Little was struck by Lewis' car and the vice crusader suffered a broken leg, broken ribs and other injuries, while his wife declared she had been permanently crippled and had suffered much pain and anguish.

The suit, filed by Attorney Charles E. Ford, charged Lewis with driving his car recklessly and in violation of the Virginia traffic laws.

Dinner will be served at 6:30 o'clock. The broadcast will begin at 10.

The plans forthe local group are being drafted by Mr. C. K. Shaw, president of the men's group, and Mrs. Ellwood street, chairman of the women's club.

Engineering Awards.

New York, May 1 (AP).—Increased State and municipal awards lifted the volume of engineering construction contracts to $37,824,000 for the current week, according to Engineering News-Record. For the corresponding week last year the awards totaled $18,341,000.

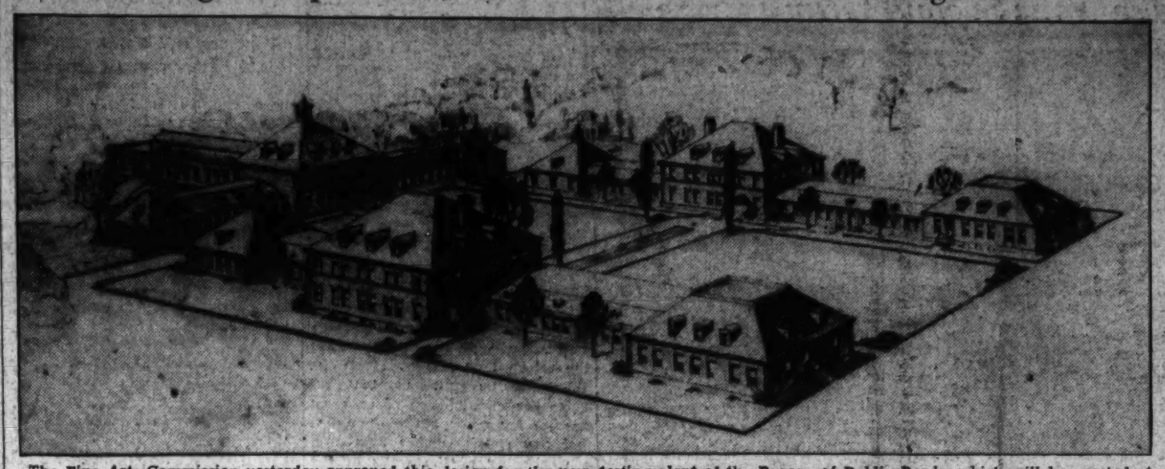
in pneumonia deaths. (Health Officer George C. Ruhland declared recently that loss of life from this disease could be materially reduced if ample funds were allotted for the Health Department laboratories. The rate jumped from 131.6 in 1934 to 151.5 last year. The 26-State total was 80.1

Typhoid deaths rose from 1.6 in 1934 to 3.2. The general average was 1.9.

Abnormally high standings were noted also in the non-communicable diseases. Washington ranked first in cancer and heart disease. Only Indiana had a higher death rate from cerebral hemmorhage and apoplexy and Washington was runner-up to Maryland in nephritis mortality. The local diabetes death rate was surpassed only by New York and Rhode Island.

If this is any consolation, Washington stood respectably well in the matter of scarlet fever. The death rate was 1.6 in 1935, the same as in 1934, compared to a 26-State average of 2 per 100,0000 population.

College Campus? No, New United States Road Testing Plant



The Fine Arts Commission yesterday approved this design for the new testing plant of the Bureau of Public Roads, which will be erected at Abingdon, Va., near the home of Nellie Custis, just off the Mount Vernon Memorial highway, between Washington and Alexandria.

G. O. P. Selects D. C. Delegates For Convention

State Committee Formed at Spirited Election; Colladay Loses.

In one of the most heated and spirited elections in the history of the local Republican organization, the elected delegates to the Republican State Committee for the District last night met and selected delegates at large to complete the formation of the State Committee.

Two tickets were presented, the one actively supported by National Committeeman Edward F. Colladay going down to defeat in a close vote in which the opposition organization ticket was elected.

The success of the organization slate places upon the Republican State Committee a number of prominent District citizens. The delegates at large list elected is as follows:

Albert W. Atwood, C. A. Baker, Charles A. Camalier, Judge James A. Cobb, F. J. Coleman, Edward F. Colladay, Charles F. Consaul, Dr. George F. Dudley, Mertin A. English, jr., Robert V. Snyder, Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Charles H. Turner, Mrs. G. Louis Weller.

The District being divided into 43 districts, each district elects a chairman, a secretary and a delegate to the State committee. For the past two weeks there have been many spirited district elections, culminating in the election of the 43 elected delegates, who, in turn, last night elected the delegate at large.

Leo A. Rover, State chairman, presided at the meeting.

On May 5 the State committee will meet to elect its officers, and on May 7 will select the delegates to the National Convention in Cleveland and the national committeeman and committeewoman.

Hundreds of editors of foreign language newspapers published in the United States will be here to attend the conference, which is under the auspices of the Foreign Language Information Service.

The morning and afternoon sessions will be devoted to the alien's relation to unemployment and crime, respectively. Winant and the Right Rev. Mgr. John A. Ryan, of Catholic University, will talk in the morning. In the afternoon Miller and Thorsten Sellin, professor of sociology, University of Pennsylvania, will speak.

At the dinner at the Washington Hotel at 7:30 p. m. Hooton, Hindus and Will Irwin, well-known publicist, will discuss "The Alien at the Bar of Public Opinion." Josephine Roche, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, will preside.

Campus-Like Road Laboratory Approved by Fine Arts Board

3 Colonial Structures Are Planned on Historic Site at Abingdon; Pennsylvania Avenue Triangle Design Also Is Indorsed.

Highly commending the architectural design, which suggests a college campus rather than a technical workshop, the Fine Arts Commission yesterday approved plans for a new testing laboratory unit to be built by the Bureau of Public Roads.

The group of three Georgian Colonial structures, consisting of two laboratories and one shop building, will be erected on a scenic 54-acre tract overlooking the Potomac River at Abingdon, on the Mount Vernon Memorial highway a short distance below Washington.

Abingdon was the estate of John Parke Custis, son of Martha Custis and aid to Gen. George Washington in the Revolutionary War. Ruins of the Custis mansion, which burned a few years ago, stand on the site. They will not be disturbed by the new development.

The Agriculture Department appropriation bill now pending in Congress provides $500,000 for the building project, an additional $140,000 being available already. The present home of the roads bureau's testing division, which is continuously conducting research into materials, road design, highway bridges and subgrade soil, consists of a few ramshackle buildings at the Agriculture Department's Arlington Experimental Farm.

Work Starts Soon.

Work is expected to start this summer on the replacement plant, one of the features of which will be a large outdoor testing track over which trucks and other vehicles will run to determine precisely how much punishment various types of roads can stand.

The land was bought by the department several years ago. A portion of the tract was surrendered susequently in connection with the Mount Vernon boulevard development. E. F. Kelley is chief of the division of tests.

The Fine Arts Commission approved a series of designs submitted by Louis Simon, supervising architect of the Treasury, for development of the downtown triangle south of Pennsylvania avenue. The principal feature is a grand plaza along Fourteenth street east of the Commerce Building. At present the site is a commercial parking lot.

Approval was given a number of newly acquired works of art submitted by John E. Lodge, curator of the Freer Gallery.

Fountain Model Approved.

A revised model for a memorial fountain at the great entrance to Arlington National Cemetery, designed by A. A. Weinman, was approved. Depicting the figure of a warrior, his right hand raised in salute, the statue will be placed in the large niche in the center of the great entrance.

The commission took under consideration a series of designs of paintings for the Department of Justice Building, which were approved in principle; a design for a memorial to the late Jules Jusserand, French Ambassador to the United States from 1903 to 1925; sketches for a proposed half-dollar for the Cleveland Centennial Commission, and models for a coin to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Cincinnati as a center of music.

Gilmore D. Clarke, landscape architect member, was elected vice chairman of the commission. President Roosevelt recently named him to a second term. Clarke is consultant to Mayor LaGuardia of New York City on park improvements, vice president of the American Society of Landscape Architects and designer of the Westchester County (N. Y.) Parkway.

Dr. Charles Moore is chairman of the Fine Arts Commission.

Yesterday's meeting was the first one attended by Henry Richardson Shepley, successor to Charles Allerton Coolidge, who died a month ago. The commission paid tribute to the service given by Coolidge.

Driver Admits Killing Woman, Police Declare

Confession Blames Drink and Jealousy in Death of His Sweetheart.

Carl Loveridge, 29, a taxi driver, yesterday was charged with murder in the death of his former sweetheart, Miss Jessie Posey, after, according to police, he made a detailed confession, blaming jealousy and liquor.

The shooting occurred early yesterday in front of Miss Posey's home at 244 Ninth street southeast. The weapon which brought death to Miss Posey was a .32-caliber revolver. Such a gun, with one chamber empty, was found in Loveridge's pocket when he was arrested.

Miss Posey had "cooled" toward him since meeting another man, police quoted Loveridge, who lives in the 1200 block of N street, as saying.

After his arrest, the hacker was questioned at the Fifth Precinct Station by Capt. Joseph Morgan and Detective Sergt. W. S. Salkeld, and the confession followed. Police did not divulge its contents.

Miss Posey was taken to Casualty Hospital, where she died of a bullet wound below her right eye.

Youth, Woman Held in Slaying Of Her Spouse

Killed Rich Invalid Because 'We Loved Each Other,' Widow Says.

By the Associated Press.

Beaumont, Tex., May 1.—Mrs. Reable Childs, 24, comely widow of a wealthy east Texan slain at Center, told Ranger Dan Hines and newspapermen today of a secret love affair behind her admitted participation in a plot to kill her invalid husband, Morlie Childs.

Ranger Hines said Mrs. Childs carried on a romance with Terrance Bramlett, 21, one-time Civilian Conservation Corps worker, over a period of two years and considered plans to get her husband out of the way.

She and Bramlett, both under arrest, freely confirmed to newspapermen their detailed statements.

Six years of married life, Mrs. Childs stated, were marked by unsuccessful efforts to leave Childs, former treasurer of Shelby County.

She said Childs, practically a cripple from infantile paralysis, had vowed "she would never live with any other man" and that he "would follow her to the end of the world."

The statement attributed to Bramlett told of borrowing a .22 caliber rifle from a friend in Jefferson, going to the Childs home and firing the fatal shot April 20. Both are charged with murder.

Mrs. Childs asked that it be definitely stated the killing was "because we love each other and not for money."

"I loved her and that seemed the only way out," Bramlett said.

In the brief time she was allowed in his cell, he made mention of her twenty-fourth birthday today and said to an officer:

Hunt Pushed for 5 Who Held Up Detroit Bank, Seized $50,000

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 1.—Michigan State police flung a line of highway blockades completely across southeast Michigan tonight in an effort to intercept five men who scooped up $50,000 in a swift holdup of a branch of the Detroit Bank today and escaped before an alarm could be sounded.

The search, joined by Ohio State police from Toledo, concentrated in the Lake Erie shore section of Stony Point, where a beer truck driver told Monroe County officers he saw a large sedan turn from the Dixie highway into a dead-end road which led to the lake shore.

The State police, reinforced by county officers and railroad special agents, searched the summer resort area thoroughly and then ordered a detailed investigation of all cottages, garages and boat houses. They considered the possibility the men might have used a boat in their escape, but could not find a trace of an abandoned car.

The robbers, leaving one man at the wheel of the large sedan worked without a moment's hesitation after they strolled leisurely into the bank at Woodland and Oakland avenues.

The leader, carrying an automatic rifle, ordered "everybody lay down," and then stood guard while two of his confederates scaled a high partition which separated the tellers' cages from the lobby. The fourth man stood guard at a window overlooking the street.

After scooping the cash into a white cloth sack, the leader fired one shot. It ricochetted off a marble counter, and splinters of the stone injured Mrs. Iva Hershey and Henry Taylor, customers, slightly.

Bank officials said the large amount of cash had been placed in the cages to handle a noon-day rush from industrial plants where employes were paid today. The robbers overlooked a larger sum in the vault, but their loot was the largest ever obtained in a holdup here.

Herold H. Reinecke, of the Department of Justice, here said his men were joining in the search.

Ten minutes after the robbery, State police had thrown 150 patrol cars into action, blocking strategic highway intersections and bridges. They were working on the theory the robbers may have been those who held up a Lima, Ohio, jewelry store last week and fatally wounded an Indianapolis policeman.

International Club To Hear First Lady

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be the main speaker at the first annual banquet of the Washington International Club at the Hay-Adams House tonight.

Chinese, Italian, French and English songs and a German folk dance will be given as part of a musical program following the dinner. Diplomatic and Government officials will be among te honored guests.

The banquet, which will be followed by a dance, is the first large affair to be given by this organization, which was founded to bring together students from different countries living in Washington.

Addresses will also be delivered by Dr. T. G. Ho and Naomi Pekmezian, outgoing and incoming presidents of the club.

Mrs. Anna O. Thompson Funeral Set for Today

Funeral services will be held at Sergeon's funeral chapel at 2:30 p. m. today for Mrs. Anna O. Thompson, 92, who died Thursday at her home, 918 M street northwest. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Thompson was born in Clarksburg, Md., but had lived in Washington for more than 50 years. She is survived by a nephew, Edwin Yewell, of this city.

Study of Static Described Here To Radio Union

Tracing of 'Atmospherics' Held Possible Aid in Weather Forecasts.

Investigations into the causes of radio static which the Carnegie Institution is conducting on the other side of the earth were described yesterday to the International Scientific Radio Union by H. F. Johnston, of the institution's department of terrestrial magnetism.

S. L. Seaton is in charge of the research, which is under way near Watheroo, western Australia. He uses a type of loop-antenna which rotates continually and so detects both the direction and frequency of static discharges, scientifically known as atmospherics.

The experiments may prove valuable not only to broadcasting reception, said Johnston, but also as an aid in meterological forecasts. Since atmospherics come from regions of thunderstorm activity, it is possible by noting their direction to determine the course of a distant thunderstorm.

Although most such disturbances originate in thunderstorm regions, observations indicate that atmospherics start principally over land areas, conforming to the known fact that thunderstorms are more frequent over land than over the ocean.

Results of the 1935 stratosphere flight in which Capts. A. W. Stevens and Orvil Anderson soared to a height of 14 miles were laid before the American Physical Society yesterday. Participating in the symposium were Capt. Stevens and an array of experts representing the Bureau of Standards, Carnegie Institution, University of Rochester and the Bartol Research Foundation of Franklin Institute.

Discussing the electrical conductivity of the troposphere and stratosphere, Dr. O. H. Gish, of the Carnegie's department of terrestrial magnetism, said records brought to earth by the Explorer II indicate the air's conductivity increases with height.

Lost District Day Lessens Sisson Hopes

By James D. Secrest.

The District will be deprived of another District day on May 11, it developed yesterday, because of the priority of national legislation.

The Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage bill, according to present indications, will be called up on that day in compliance with a petition signed by 218 members and presented to Speaker Byrns on Thursday. House leaders said they will not try to prevent the action.

This second cancellation of a District day during the closing weeks of Congress further dims the chance that the House will pass, or even have an opportunity to vote upon, the Sisson bill to repeal the anti-Red rider. The April 27 District day was set aside for the tax measure.

May 25 Also Doubtful.

Even the outlook for a District day on May 25 is not bright in view of the announced intention of House leaders to give the right of way to the major national legislation so that Congress will be in a position to adjourn around June 1.

While the deficiency appropriations bill, providing money to carry on the national unemployment relief program, is scheduled to be brought up next week, sponsors of a variety of national bills are jockeying for an opportunity to call them up before adjournment.

Representative Sisson (Democrat), of New York, yesterday placed responsibility for the fate of the anti-Red rider repeal measure squarely upon Speaker Byrns in a statement to the press.

"Responsibility for the House being given an opportunity to consider the proposal to repeal the Blanton 'red rider' rests today with Speaker Byrns," he said.

"He can allow the bill to come up in due course, or it can be prevented by parliamentary strategy.

"Under the House rules and procedure the responsibility for allowing the bill to come up, or preventing it, lies directly with the Speaker. Because of the opposition of Representative Blanton and the several members he controls, the repeal measure cannot be brought up in the House under a special rule, which requires unanimous consent of the House."

Loans Bill to Die.

He pointed out that the anti-red rider, instead of suppressing communism, has actually increased interest in it and at the same time has placed an "unjust suspicion" upon Washington public school teachers.

Even if Congress should remain in session beyond June 1, it is unlikely that another District day will be allowed because of the custom to keep the last few days open for the unanimous-consent calendar.

The juvenile court measure and the small loans bill, which has passed the Senate, could not be passed under such procedure, Mrs. Norton said. They consequently will die at this session but will be re-introduced next January, when the Seventy-fifth Congress convenes.

To Replace Homework at Anacostia High.

A new "daylight saving" experiment to eliminate all homework is to be launched Monday at the Anacostia Junior-Senior High School. Children at the school voted 4 to 1 for the idea.

Pupils will come to school a half-hour earlier than usual, but when they leave at 3 p. m. the remainder of the day will be theirs to do with as they wish, with no lessons that have to be done before coming to class the next day.

"Daylight saving"—giving the children a chance to make the most of the fine spring weather—is only one of the reasons for the experiment, explained Chester N. Holmes, principal.

"Children don't do their homework very satisfactorily at home, anyway," he said. "What with radios blaring there's too little privacy for the children in most homes, and then there are the movies and automobiles to lure them from their lessons. Besides it always has seemed to me an educational waste for a child to do his homework lesson six or seven hours after the classroom exercise."

By eliminating home assignments Holmes said he hoped for better teaching—and better learning.

Stagger Hours Urged on U. S. PlanningBoard

Carpenter, VanDuzer Join in Plea; Roosevelt Aid May Be Sought.

A systematic hour-staggering system throughout the Government working establishment in Washington was recommended to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday by Representative Randolph Carpenter (Democrat), of Kansas, and William A. Van Duzer, District traffic director.

Representative Carpenter, chairman of the special House District sub-committee investigating traffic conditions here, joined with Van Duzer in urging extension of the stagger plan.

Until a year or so ago, practically every Federal and District office began the day's work at 9 a. m. and quit at 4:30 p. m. To relieve congestion during those rush hours, some departments and bureaus changed their schedules to 8:45-4:15, :830-4, etc.

System Not Uniform.

However, due particularly to the fact that no uniform stagger system has been established, maximum relief is not being obtained, said Carpenter and aVn Duzer. Approximately 60,000 Federal employes are still beginning work at 9 a. m. and quitting at 4:30, it was pointed out.

The planning commission agreed in principle with their suggestions but held that the issue is an administrative one and should be handled by the District Commissioners. It is not improbable that the latter will request President Roosevelt to issue an executive order making stagger hours mandatory.

Parking meters, introduction of which has ben urged by Van Duzer, also were discussed by the planners, but no action was taken. J. C. Nichols, Kansas City realtor and a member of the commission, said the devices are being installed in his home city.

The commission's technical staff, headed by John Nolen, jr., was authorized to offer the newly created Airport Commission all data which it has compiled on proposed airport sites. Forty different locations were included in the studies.

Chairman William H. King, of the Senate District Committee, said he will call the nine-man Airport Commission together next week for its first meeting.

Amendment of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial bill was urged to provide that whatever site is selected shall require approval of both the planning and the Fine Arts commissions.

Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, submitted plans for its new testing laboratory buildings, which are to be erected at Abingdon, on the Mount Vernon Memorial highway. They were approved.

3 Men, 2 Boys Badly Hurt In Collisions

Many Others Injured; 2 Permits Revoked; 10 Suspended.

Two boys and three men were seriously injured in traffic accidents throughout the city yesterday.

An unidentified 14-year-old newsboy was seriously injured last night when he slipped and fell under the rear wheel of a truck on which he was "hooking" a ride on roller skates.

Police held the driver, George McClellan, 30, colored of 2428 Ontario road northwest, pending the outcome of the boy's injuries.

The boy was removed to Emergency Hospital. Doctors said he had sustained skull and internal injuries. The accident occurred at Seventh and I streets northwest.

Richard Lloyd, 6, of 60 E street northwest, while playing near his home darted between parked cars into the path of an automobile driven by Niven F. Ladd, 28, of 325 Longfellow street northwest. He was taken to Sibley Hospital and treated for a fractured skull and fracture of the right leg.

Driver in Hospital.

Lawrence M. Hynson, 35, Landover, Md., the driver, was treated at Sibley Hospital for internal injuries and a fractured right leg. Ernest B. Prangley, 49, 3006 Adams street northeast, riding in a car driven by Lewis Denton, 48, 2804 Channing street northeast, received a fractured skull, fractured leg, and internal injuries in the same crash. Denton was not injured.

Alighting from their car parked abreast, police said, in the 1400 block of Belmont street northwest, Charles Jackson, 44, Negro, and his wife, Carrie, 43, of 1406 Belmont street northwest, were struck by a car said to have been driven by Emory F. Best, 17, 1320 Fairmont street northwest.

Jackson was treated for three fractured ribs, a collapsed lung and skull injuries at Garfield Hospital. His wife was treated at the same hospital for slight cuts and bruises.

Four Injured.

Four persons were injured, one seriously, when a truck collided with an automobile at Sixteenth and Q streets northwest.

Mrs. Amelia Kialik, 56, Cleveland, Ohio, most seriously injured of the four, received a fractured thigh and lacerations of the scalp. John, 73, her husband, driver of the car, suffered an injured arm. Mrs. A. J. Klein, 35, Miami, Fla., and her son, William, 15, passengers, escaped with cuts and bruises.

Andrew Stewart, 22, of 644 Acker street northeast, who, police said, was driving the truck, was not injured. All were treated at Emergency Hospital.

2 Permits Revoked.

Meanwhile, two permits were revoked and ten others suspended by the Board of Revocations and Restorations.

Those losing their permits were William H. Drayton, jr., 1300 Geranium street northwest, 65 miles, and A. S. Lukacs, Walter Reed Hospital, 60 miles.

Suspensions included:

Thirty-day suspensions, Raymond E. Letner, 1510 Ridge place southeast; 40 miles. Larry C. Lloyd, 312 Seventeenth place northeast; 40 miles. Immanuel Neumark, 1630 Seventeenth street northwest; 40 miles.

Fifteen-day suspensions, John M. Hodges, Route No. 4, Anacostia Station, D. C., 36 miles. James P. Marshall, 7023 Blair road northwest, 36 miles. Chauncey McKoy, 537 Twenty-third place northeast, 36 miles. Vance B. Melton, 1014 Florida avenue northeast, 36 miles. John A. Norcross, 819 Taylor street northwest, 36 miles. Robert M. Patten, 5530 Hawthorne place northwest, 36 miles.

Capital's May Day Program Marked by Children's Fete

Dances, Songs and Games Are Features of Celebration; Officials Participate in Gatherings; Health Plans Outlined.

May Day was ushered into Washington yesterday with cheers and games, as thousands of children in the schools celebrated with Maypoles and festival programs.

Awards were presented for athletic efficiency and talks were given in many of the school auditoriums as May 1 also is Child Health Day throughout the Nation.

Presentation of a May Day basket to Mrs. Roosevelt at 9:30 a. m. in the White House officially opened the day's exercises.

Combined groups of children from Randle Highlands and Orr schools met at the Orr Playground at 2 p. m. in a program which included a number of dances by the younger children.

Over 400 children took part, dressed in costumes representing spring flowers, and a number of them joined in a ceremony around a Maypole. Brightwood, Park View and Wheatley schools also held May Day ceremonies.

Later a more serious celebration of May Day was held by the District of Columbia Salon, No. 14, Department des 8 Chapeaux et 40 Femmes, at 2:30 p. m. at the District of Columbia War Memorial.

Officials Participate.

Marking the first annual commemorative observance a number of officials of the American Legion and the District, including Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, took part in the ceremony.

A concert by the Marine Band preceded the series, which opened at 3 p. m., with a massing of colors. "Honor Guards" were furnished by the American Legion.

Short addresses were given by Orille C. Gaudette and Police Lieut. Horace W. Lineburg. They emphasized the work which the Legion has done throughout the year in connection with child welfare.

Services closed when the audience sang the "Star-Spangled Banner," accompanied by the Marine Band. The colors then were retired, while the Sons of the American Legion Drum and Bugle Corps played.

Organizations holding meetings in the city yesterday included a Socialist Party demonstration held in McPherson Square at 5 p. m.

Approximately 300 people, with a few placards, listened to speakers outline a program for workers' and farmers' rights.

Senator Lynn Frazier, of North Dakota, explained provisions of the Frazier-Lundeen unemployment social insurance bill, and how it would work to the benefit of the working class.

Other speakers were the Rev. J. Russell Clinchy, pastor of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, who spoke on the "Rights of Labor," and Gardner Jackson, of the American Civil Liberties Union, who spoke on suffrage for the District.

Charles Gift, vice president of the Washington Label League, opened the meeting and W. S. Risdon, president of the league, presided.

Health and security of the children of the District are of paramount importance, the District Commissioners declared in a May Day proclamation.

Health Plans Outlined.

President Roosevelt had designated yesterday as child health day, the Commissioners pointed out, adding:

The program to promote maternal and child health and to extend child welfare services in the District of Columbia is about to be launched.

"We, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, do hereby proclaim and designate the first day of May of this year as Child Health Day, and do urge, all agencies, public and private, concerned with the health and welfare of children in the District of Columbia, on this day to study plans for Federal and local co-operation in promoting the health and security of children, to note the extent to which those plans have been put into effect and to make arrangements for carrying their benefits to the children of the District of Columbia."

At the Woodrow Wilson High School assembly an address was was made by Dr. Everett Ellison, of the Tuberculosis Clinic staff, on the methods of preventing tuberculosis. Following the talk a number of lantern slides were shown with comment by Edwin S. Potter, of the Tuberculosis Association staff.

Suicide Note

'Had to Go Down,' Writes Negro River Victim.

Leaving behind her a gold wedding ring and, inside the covers of a pulp magazine, a suicide note, a young Negro woman last night walked into the Potomac, near Water and O streets southwest.

"I just had to go down," the note said. It gave her name as Julia Mapes and her address as 1110 Sixth street northwest.

Boys playing near the scene found the woman's coat and hat, also left behind, and notified police. The body was washed to shore soon after the arrival of police and rescue squad.

After an attempt to revive the woman she was pronounced dead by Dr. W. M. Hoover, of Emergency hospital.

Test Planned In Navy Yard Arrest Case

Gardner Jackson Assails Convictions of 5 for May Day Activities.

Gardner Jackson, chairman of the Washington branch of the American Civil Liberties Union, charged last night that Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran's recent decision finding five men guilty of violating a police regulation in distribution of circulars announcing a May Day celebration in McPherson Square was "a graphic example of the increasing invasion of the civil rights of the citizens of the District under pretense of the law."

Jackson announced that a test case involving the same issue would be staged deliberately in the near future and the corporation counsel and police invited to prosecute.

"Shocked" at Arrests.

"We have retained eminent counsel," Jackson said, "who not only think Judge Curran's interpretation of the regulation is unwarranted, but who are shocked as we are at his sanctioning by his decision the un-American and Nazi methods followed in the arrest of four of the defendants."

Jackson said that on April 29 Harry Blum was arrested at the Navy Yard gate after he had been warned by police to stop handing out circulars. "He was taken forthwith to the Fifth Precinct Station, with which procedure we find no fault," said Jackson.

Then, Jackson said, informed of the arrest, he told Sidney Phillips, a member of the committee for the May Day affair, to go to the station and arrange bail for Blum.

Four Others Seized.

Phillips and three other men drove to the station, Jackson said. Phillips went inside to inquire about Blum, was arrested and held for investigation, although he had not handled any of the circulars.

"Officers then went out to the car in front of the station and arrested the three men waiting for Phillips," sand Jackson. "These men had distributed circulars with Blum, but had not been arrested at the time or scene of the distribution."

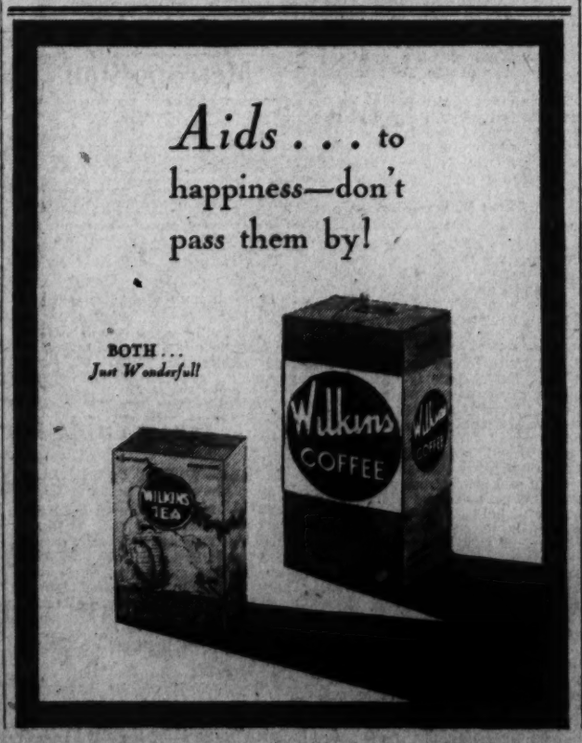
Phillips charged that he was pulled out of the police line-up subsequtntly, Jackson said, and "cursed and threatened with beating unless he revealed information as to his labor and political affiliations and those of his associates."

Boy Hurt by Shell.

William Walker, 14, of 17 Sixth street northeast, was injured yesterday while bouncing a shell in an alley in the 600 block of A street northeast when it exploded. William walked to Casualty Hospital, where doctors picked the shot from his fingers.

Col. Carpenter Shifted.

Lieut. Col. George E. Carpenter, Infantry of the National Guard, was assigned yesterday to duty in the office of the Assistant Chief of Staff for Personnel for the next six months.



Brush

With Wife's Brush Hurt, Says Takoma Husband.

Mrs. Margaret A. Carpenter, of Takoma Park, Md., was arrested yesterday and charged with breach of the peace on a warrant sworn by her husband, who claimed she hit him with a hair brush.

The husband, O. Vernon Carpenter, told police that he was so bruised from the attack as to prevent the healing of an incision from a recent major operation.

The warrant was issued by Judge H. C. Heffner. Mrs. Carpenter was released on bond of $500.

$100,000 Suit Charges Libel To Canon Chase

Raymond Schmidt, Writer, Asserts Noted Dry Hurt Reputation.

Canon William Sheafe Chase, superintendent of the International Reform Federation, Inc., and one of the Nation's best-known and most-active prohibitionists, was sued for $100,000 in the District Supreme Court yesterday by J. Raymond Schmidt, 64 V street northwest.

In his suit, filed by Attorney P. Michael Cook, Schmidt described himself as an author, lecturer, editor and writer engaged in the business of publishing "moral reform papers." He based his suit on charges he alleged were made against him of embezzlement and larceny, both of which he declared he was not guilty of perpetrating.

In addition to Canon Chase, Attorney Cook named the federation as a co-defendant. The suit, in two counts, charged both libel and slander and asked $50,000 on each count.

Letters allegedly written by the federation and remarks made by its officers, in both of which Schmidt was charged with either embezzlement or larceny, were cited in the complaint.

Virginia Bus Routes In District Changed

Virginia buses were ordered yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission to operate over North Mall drive between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets to avoid rush-hour congestion at Twelfth street and Constitution avenue. The ruling will be effective Monday.

Buses of both the Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington lines, and the Arlington and Fairfax lines are affected.

5-Year Plan For Schools Up at Parley

Fixed Part of District Revenue Is Sought for System.

Setting aside a definite proportion of District revenues for public schools expenditure was proposed to the District Commissioners by school officials yesterday at a conference considering the recently submitted five-year school-building program.

Roughly estimated to cost $25,000,000, the program prepared by the school officials calls for purchase of 44 pieces of land, construction of 24 new schools and enlargement of 45 existing buildings.

Present revenues will not permit such a program, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said after the conference. The alternative would be to increase taxes or to pay for the school betterments and possibly some other public improvements with a bond issue, he said.

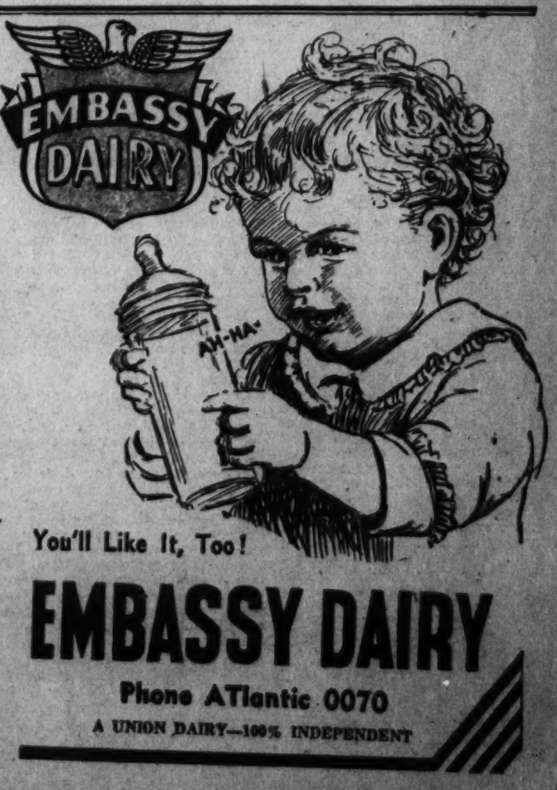
The District now is free of debt, one of the few cities in the world which is, and Congress for many years has declared its opposition to financing public works out of bonds. The idea that a part of local revenues should be set aside for schools has not been so definitely repudiated by Congress, but previous proposals for a special school tax and modifications of the general scheme have been opposed.

Despite pleas of school authorities that their latest five-year program be hastened to Congress, Commissioner Hazen said he did not expect it would be advanced this session. Before the program is submitted to the Budget Bureau, he pointed out, it will be necessary to have reasonably accurate estimates of costs. This would take some time, he said, even if blanket approval were given to the school program.

School officials do not want their expansion program mixed up in any general program of public works for the city, and Hazen said he believed the school program should be treated separately.

Following submission of the program to the Commissioners he had referred it to the special District tax committee headed by Vernon E. West, acting corporation counsel, for study in connection with a general public improvement program.

The school improvements could not be paid for out of a Federal appropriation of $5,700,000 and present taxes, even if the real property rate were raised from the current $1.50 to $1.70 per $100, Hazen and Daniel J. Donovan, auditor, said.



Vallee's Revue And Deft Film Combine at Fox

Variegated Program a Hit; Bowes Unit at Earle; Other New Bills.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"THE UNGUARDED HOUR." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the stage play by Ladislaus Fodor, adaped to the screen by Howard Emmett Rogers and Leon Gordon, co-starring Loretta Young, and Franchot Tone, with Lewis S. Stone, Roland Young, Jessie Ralph, Dudley Digges, Henry Daniell, Robert Greig, E. E. Clive, Wallace Clark, John Buckler and Aileen Pringle. Directed by Sam Wood. Previewed Tuesday, April 28.

Rudy Vallee is himself again.

Freed from the stultifying strictures placed upon his work in the late lamented George White "Scandals" by the obdurate producer of that gay gaucherie, Vallee in his "Punch Bowl Revue," currently occupying the rostrum at Loew's Fox Theater, reveals those qualities of keen showmanship that have kept him in the van of those who score decisively over the airwaves and captivate audiences from the bandstands of night clubs and the stages of theaters, by introducing numerous innovations during the course of his diversified program.

BELL.

For example, the services of a master of ceremonies are dispensed with, except for one brief microphone announcement in which Rudy apologizes unnecessarily for a bad throat that is less apparent in his singing than he evidently thinks. Then there is the use that is made of the Connecticut Yankees. This instrumental group, as familiar as it is flawless in its musicianship, is made to serve both as a stage band and a pit orchestra—in the former capacity, it is the beneficiary of some of the most effective lighting that has been seen on a local stage this season. One suspects that they carry their own electrician.

Specialists Excel.

It is midway of the revue that the specialists have their innings, and a fine coterie of entertainers they are. Cyril Smith and Hildegarde Halliday content themselves with one character impression each—the former in a ridiculous account, in thick British dialect, of "The Lion and the Blacksmith of Blackpool;" the latter in a bit concerning a lady with hay fever at an afternoon tea.

The dancing inevitable on such a bill is supplied by Ford, Booey and Daley, three sepia dancers, who seem to be not total strangers to top hats, white ties and tails. Their solo and ensemble routines are a match for the best you will encounter in years of theatergoing. Vocalism is nicely looked to by the Three Graces, a trio of charming young women, and the Gentlemen Songsters, a fine male quartet which Vallee now again expands into a quintet and which occasionally combines with the Graces to form a mixed choir. There is a versatile fellow, too, who should be Seab Waring, or Red Stanley, or somebody, who contributes a few imitations that are humorously provocative—a decrepit Model T, airplanes on the Western Front, and the like. Extremely well done, even if a bit hackneyed.

Interlarded with these individual contributions to the revue's lively measures are the orchestral numbers, reviving such old favorites as "Life Is Just a Bowl of Cherries," exhibiting the solo talents of the members of the band; the "Stein Song" and, for a finale, the rousing "Annabelle."

Ending, as it began, on the stage, the orchestra forms the background of a concluding ensemble that brought the house tumbling down about the ears of the performers yesterday afternoon.

A Screen Play Worth Watching.

On the screen this week is that cleverly executed and skillfully acted film play of blackmail and murder in high places in London in which the stellar roles are played by Loretta Young and Franchot Tone, with parts of scarcely less importance played quite as effectively by Lewis S. Stone, Roland Young, Jessie Ralph, Dudley Digges, Henry Daniell, E. E. Clive and others of note. "The Unguarded Hour" is the name.

The plot of this engrossing, although slightly loquacious, camera drama furnishes an unusual surprise fillip by revealing a double twist that can not be more than half anticipated by even the most astute solver of police puzzles.

Of the costellar duo, Miss Young, to these eyes, distinctly outplays Mr. Tone for the first half of the celluloid footage. Once Mr. Tone, as the aristocratic young barrister with a past, gets into his stride, however, it is all even.

The picture is staged with a tasteful degree of opulence, as befits the rank and station of the principal figures in the action, and has been photographed with artistic discretion by an expert in both angles and lighting.

Whole Bill Has "Class."

"The Unguarded Hour" possesses the priceless virtue of cumulative effectiveness. It increases in both momentum and suspense as developments pile up with ever increasing speed, to terminate in a climax and denouement that are as unexpected as they are plausible and sound in their psychology and logic. Circumstantial evidence, it seems, is a dangerous thing—even in the hands of the chief of Scotland Yard.

A new issue of the Fox Movietone News and incidental orchestral embellishments round out a bill that is able to boast an abundance of that intangible quality known colloquially as "class," on both the boards and the silver sheet—a happy consummation that occurs none too often in the course of a season.

"THE GOLDEN ARROW." First National picturization of a story by Michael Arlen, starring Bette Davis and Featuring George Brent, with Carol Hughes, Eugene Pallette, Ivan Lebedeff, Craig Reynolds, Rafael Storm, Henry O'Neill, Catherine Doucet, E. E. Clive, G. P. Huntley, jr., Sara Edwards, Hobart Cavanaugh and Earl Foxe. Directed by Alfred E. Green. Reviewed Friday morning.

That was a dangerous precedent Carole Lombard established, getting that black eye in "Love Before Breakfast!" The thing has proved contagious, as any such efficient comedy device must.

What I mean to say is that, once its principals get fairly knee-deep into the major action of "The Golden Arrow," the new screen play on view at the Earle Theater, the "shiner" and the "mouse" become almost universally prevalent. It all starts when Bette Davis acquires a bona-fide and wholly legitimate black eye on the tennis court, when too vicious a male return catches her flush in the lamp, in a manner of speaking. The young newspaper reporter to whom she has been married as a more or less futile move to stave off a horde of titled fortune-seekers, infesting the Florida resorts, sure he will be blamed for it anyway, decides that the story of the domestic battle which is bound to break on the evidence of the bride's optic might as well be a good one, so he maneuvers himself into a companion decoration.

Getting finally to the bottom of the entire grotesque business of his marriage, and why his wife is posing as the richest girl in the world, the newsman inaugurates a conscientious and far-reaching campaign of eye-blacking on his own account that leaves the hotel lobbies and the countryside thickly strewn with orbs of midnight hue.

Furious But Not Futile.

The whole laughable business, really, is very simple — very. Young and attractive Mr. Jones, assigned to interview Daisy Appleby, corners her in a swimming pool, aboard her yacht in Miami waters, by a ruse. She is furious, as young heiresses always are in such circumstances—so furious, in fact, that she marries the guy after a gay night at the honky-tonks and hot-dog stands!

The audience, but not Mr. Jones, is made privy to the fact that Miss Appleby is just a good-looking bit of the old malarky—a former cashier in a cafeteria masquerading as a lady Croesus just to help out the boys running the beauty cream business in a publicity stunt. Mr. Jones, in the meantime, having sold himself down Biscayne Bay for only enough leisure to write his book, adopts the old one of making his wife jealous by going for the other young heiress in the hotel in a big way. She is the daughter of the right guy who owns all those oil wells.

From that time on, and with the tip about all those black eyes, it should be easy to write your own ticket. Correct! Daisy is unmasked, Jones decides that he loves her for herself alone, the hated rival turns out to be a New York traffic cop—and married to Daisy's sister, at that!—and everything ends as it should in any self-respecting farce.

"The Golden Arrow," which sounds almost as if it might refer to beer, is handsomely staged and played with spontaneous good nature by Bette Davis, George Brent, Carol Hughes, Catherine Doucet, Eugene Pallette, Ivan Lebedeff, Rafael Storm, Earl Foxe and numerous others. You can add it up from any direction and it doesn't make a grain of sense, unless nonsense is sense at this particular time of year—and it might be, at that.

Are Teamed Again.

Bette Davis and George Brent have played opposite each other so frequently before that there is scant novelty in this coalition, although each is, of course, completely equal to everything he is called upon to do. Mr. Brent pouts a little too much, perhaps, but Miss Davis does as well with her half of the enterprise as any Academy Award winner could with anything so utterly frivolous and lacking in dramatic substance.

Maj. Bowes' Amateurs on Tour, responsible for the vaudeville portion of the program, present by far the most professional hour of entertainment of any of these itinerant groups of aspirants for stage preferment who have got by the gong. There is not an act of the many on the bill that could not pass muster on the "big time"—at least for the brief span of its duration.

DeHaan and Kramer open the festivities in clever xylophone duets, immediately this side of Miss Audrey Sieber's single announcement of the afternoon. They are followed by Boole Powell, a little fellow with a booming bass voice; Ann Mahoney, singing violiniste; Parker Everly, in imitations—most of them good; Bill and Bob Santley, Bill an accordionist of skill, Bob a singer in the Bing Crosby manner and a clarinetist in Ted Lewis'; Gloria Rich, a carbon copy of Ina Ray Hutton, without the band, who sings and does a neat toe-tap; Billy Klower, a tap dancer of unusual talent; Tony Rosso, who plays tunes on fire extinguishers and inner tubes, and the Eagles Harmonica Quintet, hot on the heels of Borrah Minnevitch and His Harmonica Rascals.

A Capital Soprano.

These youngsters are under the general guidance in their efforts of Loring Smith, who has been through here before in the same capacity, and each is a potential show-stopper on any man's stage.

A Popeye cartoon comedy, the newsreel and Freddie Clark's orchestral interludes augment a spring program that is shrewdly dedicated to frivolity and fun. N. B. B.

Alaska Lends Beauty to Screen

Terry Walker, the charming young blonde so effectively pictured above, was born in Alaska, lived ten years in Hollywood and was discovered by Paramount screen scouts singing in a Miami night club—which is, as everyone will admit, covering a deal of territory for one so young. Her portrait by Norman Rockwell on the cover of a popular magazine led to her picture contract. Terry's first film appearance will be with Randolph Scott, Frances Drake and Tom Brown in "And Sudden Death," a celluloid warning against reckless driving in favor of wreckless.

"THE TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE." Paramount picturization of the John Fox, jr., classic, adapted to the screen by Grover Jones, featuring Henry Fonda, Sylvia Sidney, Fred MacMurray, Fred Stone, Reuiah Bondi, Robert Barratt, Spanky McFarland and Fuzzy Knight. Directed by Henry Hathaway. Reviewed Friday night by Dorothea Lewis.

It's the "old-fashioned" black and white we'll have to get used to after the glorious, natural colors of this American minor-classic which waited for exactly the right moment and the right medium for its latest picturization.

It might have been just another feudin' story without the greens of its pines, blues of its skies, lakes and mountains, and the little details of grayish-green moss on a brown water wheel, but, with them, there comes an added excitement, a robustness, an autheticity which immeasureably heightens its interest.

Color photography has made quiet but great progress since the rather flamboyant "Becky Sharp," and now it opens up a whole new set of values for the camera, making details, unnoticed before, vitally important, quickening routine items into vividness. There has probably never been a lovelier photographic shot than that of the black locomotive coming around the wooded turn, with its white steam shooting out, yet it's just another railroad train, plus color. And note the accenting green signal flag and the red fire bucket.

Color Not Only Star.

But scenery and photography are far from the only stars of this story, which everybody has read, but how many remember.

The Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia have moved west to the Rockies, the John Fox plot has changed its focus, but the spirit of the feudin', hard-living, but sometimes very peaceful, easy-going country remains.

The Tollivers and the Falins have hated and killed each other for generations over a quarrel too far back in memory to mean anything.

The Falins have a whole passel of men left; the Tolliver's have only a daughter, June, a baby son, and one big kin boy, Cousin Dave. June and Dave are to marry next "greenup" time, but progress and education, the railroad and Jack Hale come to the mountains to change all the plans of the Tollivers and all the Falins.

The crack of squirrel rifles begins and ends the story. But within that feudin' frame there is tenderness and philosophy and fun. And there are some of the grandest, brawling fights, fought with swagger and gusto.

Three Players Star.

There are three performances worth cheers, or four stars, or whatever may be the highest order of merit—those of Henry Fonda, Beulah Bondi and Fred Stone.

Fonda is a Dave of real stature, kind, gentle, sweet with his friends and kin, fierce and deep in hate with his enemies, including the civilization that is encroaching on his beloved land. This is the sort of thing he does so perfectly, like his Dan of "The Farmer Takes a Wife," but stronger and not so tinged with "quaintness."

Miss Bondi is proving again and again these days that she is one of our best and most important character actresses, and Fred Stone is becoming as beloved on the screen as he was on the American stage for decades. Fuzzy Knight, as Tater, who sings when he's happy and sings when he's sad, adds greatly, as does Robert Barratt, the Falin clan head.

Fred MacMurray is pleasant enough as Jack Hale, but why must screen ladies always choose the less attractive of the two men they always have to choose between? As for the screen lady in this case, Sylvia Sidney, we found her disappointing. She is "cute" enough in the opening scenes, but she is never a mountain girl and her latter-day hysterics are really unfortunate.

Violence Is Asset.

The picture has a violence about it which is welcome after too much drawing room politeness in our screen fair—particularly in the flaming camp, the fist fights and that sharp, agonizing shooting of Dave and the Falin son.

Parts of the picture drag, there are probably too many tears, but all in all it's quite up to being the milestone it is—and it is positively the first all-color picture that didn't hurt our eyes.

The Palace is generous also with its subsidiaries: Robert Benchley, adding to life's pleasure by his subtle (?) worries over its perplexities (etiquette now bothers him, but he masters it all happily); a new Walt Disney hero, one Elmer Elephant, who hates his trunk and loves Tillie the Tiger. (Elmer's very nice, but we are still true to Donald Duck), and a very long newsreel.

"ECSTASY." Eureka release of the Slavia-Films production, featuring Hedy Kiesler, Jaromir Rogos, Aribert Mog and Leopold Kramer. Music and lyrics by Kola Jossef, Hadju Imre, Henry Gershwin and William Colligan. English dialogue by Jacque A. Koerpel. Directed by Gustav Machaty. Reviewed (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

Deftly translating the entire range of human emotions into pantomimic action, with a counterpointing musical score, "Ecstasy," the Czechoslovakian winner of several prizes for cinematographic art, goes into a deserved second week.

Excellently cast and superbly performed, the picture offers a work most unusual in comparison with the productions emanating from American studios. That "Ecstasy here is a financial success is no doubt due to the public curiosity piqued by the picture's hectic history on this side of the Atlantic. Yet, whatever the reason for the unprecedented patronage, the production is deserving.

That there are and will be diametrically opposed opinions on this picture is a foregone conclusion, yet, when one looks for real artistry in pantomime, accentuated by masterful camera tecnique, there should be no argument but that the work of Hedy Kiesler and her excellent supporting company deserved the high place it has attained in Europe.

"THE COUNTRY DOCTOR." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Charles E. Blake, adaped to the screen by Sonya Levien; photographed under the technical supervision of Dr. Allan Ray Dafoe, starring the Dionne Quintuplets and featuring Jean Hersholt, with Dorothy Peterson, June Lang, Slim Summerville, Robert Barrat, Michael Whalen, Jane Darwell, Frank Reicher, John Qualen, Montagu Love, David Torrence, Helen Jerome Eddy, George Meeker and William Benedict. Directed by Henry King. Reviewed Friday afternoon (repeat engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

The trials and tribulations of general medical practitioners form the basis for the engrossing screen narrative of "The Country Doctor." As if the story, per se, were not enough to raise the picture out of the ruck of the commonplace, there have been added those incomparable youngsters, the wee Marie, Annette, Cecile, Emilie and Yvonne Dionne, of Collendar, Ontario.

Jean Hersholt has always been one of the screen's excellent character men, whose abilities were ever manifest, no matter how small the part, and here, in the biggest chance of his career, he comes through with a delineation of highest rank. Dorothy Peterson is the faithful nurse, whose limning is no less brilliant than that of Mr. Hersholt. John Qualen is the father of the quintuplets, and Slim Summerville the sheriff. Between Mr. Qualen and Mr. Summerville (and especially during the five-fold blessed event) the comedy of the piece fares well, and fine fun it is!

June Lang and Michael Whalen provide the young love interest; Robert Barrat provides the near-villainy, with George Meeker his accessory, and David Torrence, Jane Darwell, Montagu Love, Frank Reicher and other interpretations of master caliber.

And the quintuplets. They are their own best advertisement and at the age of 2, they romp about in unbounded glee, unmindful of the strangers in their midst and, with Mr. Hersholt rolling on the floor with them, seem to have the time of their lives.

"I Feel Like a Feather in The Breeze," a screen song with Jack Denny and his orchestra; "Choose Your Partners," a Frolic of Youth comedy; and a release of the Metrotone News are auxiliaries on a program of which the feature has everything essential to unalloyed enjoyment.

Metropolitan

"MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN." Columbia Pictures filmization of a story by Clarence Buddington Kelland, adapted to the screen by Robert Riskin, starring Gary Cooper, with Jean Arthur, George Bancroft, Lionel Stander, Douglas Dumbrille, Raymond Walburn, H. B. Warner, Emma Dunn, Warren Hymer, Ruth Donnelly, Christian Rub, Walter Catlett, John Wray and George Cooper. Directed by Frank Capra. Reviewed Friday night, second week of repeat engagement, by Sally Stroud.

This picture is definitely worth your money. Gary Cooper will amuse you immensely, he will tug at your heartstrings, if you will forgive my implying he is sentimental. He isn't. He is just a young feller from Mandrake Falls, Vt., who wants to get rid of 20 grand, dumped upon him in the form of a legacy.

Before becoming rich, he had a fine time playing the tuba in the town band and writing greeting-card verses. But with wealth, he became the prey of racketeers and chiselers and reporters. Especially a girl reporter, Jean Arthur, who won the Pulitzer award for her racy stories of his escapades—in which she was co-conspirator.

Because he wished to give away his money to needy farmers, in the form of land grants, he was termed insane. Exonerated, after a hilarious, dramatic, magnificently-idiotic and sane trial, Gary teams up with Jean for the finish.

Presumably, they will retire to Vermont, where all the inhabitants of Mandrake Falls are "pixilated," save two old ladies, who live on Gary's bounty, but nevertheless almost convicted him of insanity before he proved they had a blind spot concerning those whom the pixies had touched.

Betty Boop's doggie gets into difficulties in an accompanying cartoon. The newsreel and shorts amplify the appeal of the program.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office

By Morgan Baker.

A new warning was issued yesterday by the Civil Service Commission that misleading information is being given the public by representatives of some correspondence schools which sell "civil service" courses.

BAKER.

Over a period of years the commission has been receiving complaints from all parts of the country which indicate that opportunities for obtaining Federal employment have been greatly exaggerated.

It is made clear that no school has any connection whatever with the Civil Service Commission or with any other branch of the Government, and also that the commission has no agents who solicit applications for civil service positions or who sell "civil service" courses.

The warning points out that no school can "guarantee" Government employment, and none is given information regarding examinations or any other information which is not available to the general public. The commission states that it does not recommend any school, and explains that it is not necessary for anyone to take a course with a so-called civil service school in order to compete in a civil service examination.

A special point was made of the fact that information concerning examinations may be obtained at any time, without cost, from the secretary of the Civil Service Board at any first or second class postoffice or from the commission's office at Seventh and F streets northwest, Washington.

Earl O. Dunlap (P), examiner in Claims Audit Division, Federal Housing Administration, will marry Anne Hemphill Rogers at 4 p. m. today at the Presbyterian Church, Sixth and Maryland avenue northeast. Dunlap, former football star of Georgia Tech, is from Rock Hill, S. C., and Miss Rogers is from Abbeville, S. C.

Eight to Three-Thirty.

This early to bed,
Seems an adage dead;
How can it make you wise?

To crawl in the hay
Before close of day,
And six a. m. arise.

You can't e'er mingle
Nor n'er meet a single
One of the reg'lar guys!

Dawn Patrol.

In all the various writeups of Tammany Young, few have seen fit to mention an important thing: That Tammany was a good-luck token to his friends . . . Not that Tammany ever subscribed to the view . . . "It's Mae's prayers," he always insisted . . . Mae was his wife, a fine little woman, who could be found in her church every morning . . .

CLARK GABLE

Slated for the picturesque byways of life from the time his father insisted that he be named after Tammany Hall, Tammany never prized "color" above work . . . He was always a hustler, always ambitious, always willing to turn to any task that would earn him a few dollars . . . He scorned the other gate-crashers because they tried to "crash" their way through life . . . He worked . . . At any prize fight or World Series game, or theatrical opening, Tammany would make himself useful by compiling a list of the notables who were present, for the newspaper men . . . Or he'd carry lemonade to the press section, or hot dogs . . . He was a grand little fellow, honest, decent, hard working.

Grim Notes: Of the 39 aviators who performed in "Hell's Angel," 26 have taken their last flights . . . That is a multiple of 13 . . . And 13, oddly enough, are still alive.

Stem Jottings: George Price's business manager, Joe Bronson, will wed Doris Heller . . . The Jan Rubinis have Built Up to a Terrific Letdown . . . Ted Lloyd and Marcia Workman will re-wed September 13 . . . Eddy Duchin's cousin, Esther Barron, is hotspotting with E. Daniels, in the Rudy Vallee crew . . . Pitzy Katz and his ex are Back Together Again, despite the divorce papers . . . Al Shayne, the warbler, and Winifred Schuyler are in tune . . . Mike Kletz has been made the Will Hays of the plate-glass industry, of all things.

Theatrical profession is rooting for Tess Gardella in her suit against a radio chain . . . Tess is the east side Italian girl who established herself in the profession as Aunt Jemima, a large, genial singer of songs . . . The radio chain, refusing to pay her the salary she requested, retaliated by putting another singer on the radio and calling her "Aunt Jemima" . . . So the Gardella gardenia sued, and the stagers are rooting, because all of them have a definite interest in the protection of a stage name . . . "Steal my purse," etc.

Notes: Don't be surprised if Will Rogers, jr., and Patricia Ziegfeld merge two of the most illustrious theatrical names . . . Ben (Fox) Silvey is hijacking the Loretta Young-Eddie Sutherland attachment . . . Conrad Nagel and Kay Limaker are blazing . . . Dick Watt, jr., makes those frequent Coast trips to see Jean Muir . . . Harpo Marx is finally building a home—for Susan Fleming? . . . Jack Kirkland and Julia Laird have dissolved . . . Frankie Darro, the former kid actor, will wed Virginia Garland . . . The Budd Hulicks (Stoopnagle and Budd) are worrying their pals.

Repeal, at least, served one sentimental purpose . . . Prohibition ruined the famous Astor Bar, once the rendezvous of the town . . . Repeal has brought all of its pristine glory, and now you can't jam your way in . . . It is the most exciting of the Stem oases.

If you want to find all of the wealthier divorcees of the town, I recommend a trip to any of the cocktail lounges . . . Every afternoon the clan of smartly dressed women idlers make their way to these spots, sip their drinks and flirt with the bandsmen, or the men-about-town, who drift in at 5 o'clock . . . "I have nothing else to do," one of the women told me, when I marveled at her acceptance of the monotony . . . That, I guess, is as good a reason as any other.

Not many days ago, the papers reported that one of Manhattan's wealthier men had settled $250,000 on a girl . . . The lowdown is one of the better stories of the town . . . Relatives of the man, determined to break off their affair, and detectives learned that the girl was extremely superstitious . . . So they arranged for an astrologer to stumble into her path, quite accidentally, of course . . . He told her to break off with the man, that she was slated to meet a royal prince . . . A few days later, she met the prince, and married him . . . When she learned of the trick that had been played upon her, and that the prince was an actor engaged for the role, the girl sued . . . And won an out-of-court settlement of $250,000 . . . None of which will go to fortune-tellers!

Feverish Louisville Awaits Derby Today; Brevity 7-5 Choice

Season Mark Is Set by Nats' 17-1 Triumph Over Browns

Hammer 3 Hurlers for 18 Hits, Scoring 7 Runs in First.

DeShong Permits Only Five Safeties

Miles, Lewis and Kuhel Get 3 Hits Each as 8,000 See Game.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Vying with the shrieks of 8,000 Ladies' Day fans at Griffith Stadium yesterday was the steady rapping of Washington baseHits as baserunners went round and round and the Nats beat the St. Louis Browns by the lopsided score of 17 to 1.

If it had a-been a prize fight, they'd a-stopped it in the first inning, when the Nats had the Browns reeling under a seven-run onslaught, but it wasn't, so Washington went ahead to score some more in clusters of three and four and set a new season's record for runs in a single game.

Jimmy DeShong was there, back on the pitching mound for the first time since that day two weeks ago when he beat the Athletics with a two-hit performance. DeShong showed the strain of his recent illness, surrendering five hits to the Browns.

How It Happened.

It was quite a spree. Every player who started in the Washington line-up scored at least one run, and every Nat with the exception of De Shong collected at least one hit. Dee Miles, Buddy Lewis and Joe Kuhel fattened their batting averages with three safe socks and the total was 18.

Jim Walkup, who started on the mound for Hornsby's Browns, walked into a storm of baseHits in that first inning, when the Nats scored seven times, but was still out there pitching in the second until he walked the first two men to face him.

Then Hornsby called in his new relief pitcher, Elon Hogsett, and Hogsett afforded no relief whatsoever, for anybody. Hogsett figured in a three-run assault in the second, a similar uprising in the third and a four-run rally in the fifth when the Nats concluded their scoring for the day with DeShong in possession of a comforting 17-1 lead.

It was back in the third inning that the Browns averted a shutout, when Lyn Lary and Julius Solters put together a pair of doubles to leftfield, but DeShong at that point was out in front, 10 to 0.

Nats Score 7 Runs in First.

Those first inning details were these:

Grove Pitches Red Sox to 6-0 Win

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 1. — Invincible Robert Moses Grove turned in his fourth brilliant victory of the season today when the league-leading Red Sox blanked Cleveland, 6-0, before a ladies' day crowd of 20,000.

It was the lanky southpaw's second shut-out of the season and during his 33 1-3 innings on the mound this season, he has given the opposition but one earned run.

Only two of the visitors reached second base. Billy Knickerbocker made the keystone sack by slashing out a double in the third inning and Jim Gleeson, filling in for the seriously ill Bruce Campbell in rightfield, tripled off the left-center wall in the seventh.

The Sox fell on Mel Harder for three runs in the second inning, which Bill Werber opened with a single. Rick Ferrell followed with a two-bagger and Harder filled the bases by passing Ossie Melillo. Grove's long fly scored Werber and dusty Cooke brought in the other two runners with a mighty triple to right field.

Dark Flight Favorite To Win Gold Cup Race

By the Associated Press.

Warrenton, Va., May 1.—Thirty-seven outstanding steeplechasers champed at their bits tonight, awaiting the bugler's notes that will signify the opening of the fifteenth annual Gold Cup Race meet here tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Hotels and homes were crowded to capacity and meet officials predicted an attendance of 20,000 if favored with good weather.

The Gold Cup course at Broadview, estate of Alexander B. Hagner, was in excellent condition for the fifteenth running of the meet, regarded as one of the steeplechase classics of the country.

Mrs. Marion Dupont Somerville, who claimed the Virginia Grand National Steeplechase in 1935 with Oliver C., will send Night Retreat to the post tomorrow in the hope of repeating.

Of the ten entries for the event, the bay gelding by Paragon II, Dark Flight, is considered the favorite by Fauquier County riders.

First Event.

The Grand National will be the first race on the card. Nick Gaines, Boy Scout bugler, will give the signal at 2:30.

The Gold Cup Steeplechase, 4 miles over the timber course, was won last year by Indigo, of John M. Schiff's Northwood Farms, New York. The feature event has ten entries for tomorrow, including the 1935 champion; Inshore, winner of the Maryland Cup last Saturday when Henry Frost, jr., of Middleburg, piloted the winner home; Ostend, owned by Mrs. Frank M. Gould and trained by William B. Street, another likely contender, and Prophet, of Flying Horse Farms, and trained by J. T. Skinner.

Flying Horse Farms has one leg on the trophy, valued at $1,000, by its victory in 1934 with Gilta II.

The third race will be the Broadview, about 2½ miles over brush. A steeplechase handicap for hunters holding certificates from the National Steeplechase Hunt Association, it lists 12 qualified hunters, including such winners as Mrs. Grace Eustis' The Mole, Frank M. Gould's What Have You, Albert E. Pierce's Isolateur, and Hardyal and Dapotto, from the Howard C. Fair Stables.

May Repeat.

Mrs. Fair's entry, Massapequa, won the 1935 race and is conceded a good chance to repeat this year. What Have You, sleek chestnut by Tryster, enjoyed the favorite's place tonight.

The Warrenton Hunt Cup, steeplechase over timber for hunters, maidens and winners of one race, has five of the best in hunters to start—Mrs. Frank M. Gould's Ostend, Mrs. Gerard S. Smith's Sun Faun, Paul Mellon's Corn Dodger, and Gittings Boyce's Walter K.

Yankees Take Fifth in Row By 3 to 2

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 1. — Finishing his first game in four starts, Johnny Broaca gave the Chicago White Sox seven hits today and the New York Yankees won their fifth straight victory, 3 to 2.

All the scoring was done in the first three innings of the ball game, Broaca shutting the White Sox out with only one hit in the last six.

Ted Lyons pitched for Chicago.

Shikat Is Ordered To Meet Ali Baba

New York, May 1. (U.P.)—The New York State Athletic Commission today ruled that Wrestler Dick Shikat, of Germany, first must wrestle Ali Baba, of Turkey, before he can meet Chief Sanooke at the New York Coliseum on Monday and then take on Ali Baba in Madison Square Garden Tuesday. Ali Baba threw Shikat in Detroit last week and then claimed Dick's heavyweight title.

Derby Cash Guards Receive Orders to "Let 'Em Have It"

By the Associated Press.

Louisville, Ky., May 1.—A squad of 32 "crack shots" will be on guard tomorrow at Churchill Downs to protect the estimated $1,500,000 "handle" of the parimutuel machines, Derby Day.

While an excited crowd is watching the sixty-second running of the Kentucky Derby, a grim group of men will watch the huge pile of cash.

"If anybody tries to get through those doors, don't ask questions. Let them have it."

These were the instructions given today by George T. Kinnarney, special Downs policeman, to his squad, and by the "let them have it" he didn't mean the money.

At each door leading into the "money room" two guards will stand, while in the five smaller counting rooms, additional guards will keep watch.

Strict provisions have been made as to the persons employed as guards and during the 20 years Kinnarney has been in charge there has been no robbery attempt.

Ranking Tennis Stars Enter Finals

By John R. Vosburgh.

Ruddy-necked Wilmer Allison and lithe Johnny Van Ryn, fighting for a place on the United States Davis Cup team, will meet their young rivals, Don Budge and Gene Mako, this afternoon at the Chevy Chase Club in the finals of the annual Chevy Chase invitation doubles tournament.

Both teams waded through two matches yesterday to gain the final round, each losing one set in the process. It was Barney Welsh and Ralph McElvenny, Washington's National Public Parks doubles champions, who took the one set from National Champions Allison and Van Ryn. The final scores were 3—6, 6—0, 6—1.

Match to Bear on Selections.

Red-headed Budge and his square-shouldered partner dropped a set to J. Gilbert Hall, of East Orange, N. J., and Hal Surface, of Kansas City, in their semifinal match, before winning, 6—1, 5—7, 6—2.

Today's match will be the fourth meeting between the two teams during the spring season. Three times in a row have Budge and Mako, the youthful California pair, spanked the veteran internationalists. Still, however, it was the consensus among observers at the Chevy Chase Club that the youngsters have not convinced the powers that be that they deserve the honor of meeting Australia later this month in the North American zone tie at Philadelphia.

Hence, today's match possibly will have no little bearing on the final choice of the selection committee.

It took the desperate play of Welsh and McElvenny to bring out the best Allison and Van Ryn had to offer. The Washington team had a neat touch in the first set, volleying accurately for placements, lobbing strategically and more than matching their opponents both overhead and off the ground.

Welsh, McElvenny Crack.

Budge and Mako appeared either lackadaisical or calm, which possibly explains the reason they dropped the second set to Hall and Surface. Budge's famous backhand was clicking in great style, but his volleying was highly erratic.

Quarter-Finals.

Donald Budge (Oakland, Calif.), and Gene Mako (Los Angeles), defeated Samuel Gilpin (Philadelphia), and William R. Reese (Atlanta), 6—4, 6—2; J. Gilbert Hall (East Orange, N. J.), and Hal Surface (Kansas City), defeated Yelverton Garnett (Washington), and Watson M. Washburn (New York), 6—4, 6—3; Bernard Welsh (Rockville, Md.), and Ralph McElvenny (Washington), defeated Karl Behr and Dean Mathey (New York), 7—5, 6—3; Wilmer Allison (Austin, Tex.), and John Van Ryn (Philadelphia), defeated Thomas J. Mangan and Clarence M. Charest (Washington), 6—1, 6—2.

Semi-Finals.

Budge and Mako defeated Hall and Surface, 6—1, 5—7, 6—2; Allison and Van Ryn defeated Welsh and McElvenny, 3—6, 6—0, 6—1.

Campbell, Indian Star, Seriously Ill

By the Associated Press.

Boston, May 1.—Bruce Campbell, the Cleveland Indians' rightfielder and leading batter, was removed to St. Elizabeth's Hospital today, apparently suffering from a recurrence of spinal meningitis, which kept him idle most of last season.

Campbell became ill last night on the train from New York. When he arrived here, he was attended by Dr. Edward J. O'Brien, the Boston Red Sox physician.

Dr. O'Brien was unwilling to discuss Campbell's case until he had completed his examination. He did say, however, that the ball player was seriously ill. According to members of the Cleveland Club, Campbell's mother has been summoned here from Chicago.

Yanks Sell Walker To Chicago Sox

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 1.—Outfielder Dixie Walker was sold today by the New York Yankees to the Chicago White Sox in a straight cash transaction.

Walker has been suffering from a lame arm for the last two years and in 1934 he was placed on the voluntary retired list.

He played in eight games last year and although this year he has showed signs of his old form, the Yankees are overburdened with outfield talent in Myril Hoag, Ben Chapman, George Selkirk and Roy Johnson and Joe Di Maggio.

Di Maggio, the widely-publicized rookie who has been suffering from burns of his foot, is scheduled to make his major league debut Sunday against the St. Louis Browns.

Rumor of Setback to Favorite Is Denied; 2 Fillies Named.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

Louisville, Ky., May 1.—Threatening storm-clouds and speculative brain-storms, superimposed upon muggy weather and a muddy track at Churchill Downs, floated tonight over the surging scenes of the Kentucky Derby, to be run tomorrow for the sixty-second time and under the most opulent circumstances since boom days.

No sooner had the names of 19 3-year-olds, including 15 colts, two geldings and two fillies, been dropped in the entry box today for America's most popular and picturesque horse race than sensational reports spread that the 7-5 favorite, Joseph E. Widener's Brevity, had gone wrong.

Persisting throughout the day, despite prompt and emphatic denial by Trainer Pete Coyne, this development fired afresh the speculative orgy, added to the confusing prospects and heightened the probability that conditions will make for a wide-open race over the route of one mile and a quarter, with a $50,000 pot of gold at stake and close to 60,000 fans feverishly on edge.

Entries Top 1935.

With several surprise nominations on the entry list, including Dnieper, gelding owned by Mrs. P. A. B. Widener and a stable-mate of Brevity, the total was one more than the 1935 Derby field and within three of the record. The sticky condition of the Downs racing oval, however, coupled with the official forecast of "probable showers" tonight and tomorrow, made it unlikely that more than 15 horses will go to the post, around 4:40 p. m. (Central standard time).

Trainer Coyne ridiculed reports that there was anything wrong with Brevity or any basis whatsoever for suspicion about the favorite's condition. He insisted there was no conection between the colt's unimpressive workout this morning, when clockers caught Brevity in 0:52 2-5 for a half mile, and the sudden nomination of Dnieper, heretofore listed as a nonstarter. Coyne not only declared this was not a precautionary move on the part of the racing interests he represents but that Dnieper very likely would not go to the post.

"They are absolutely ridiculous," said Coyne in reference to the fast-flying rumors about Brevity. "He'll lead the parade. He's a Saturday horse and tomorrow's his day."

Coyne Disappointed.

Coyne, as well as all other observers, was disappointed by Brevity's obvious dislike for the sticky track. The trainer insists his charge can travel in any kind of going, but Brevity's record shows all five of his previous winning performances, including the record-equaling victory in this year's Florida Derby, have been over fast tracks.

Racing sharps believe Brevity has "trained off," even if nothing has gone wrong. They also suggest Owner Widener may still be pursued by his Derby "jinx."

On top of all this Brevity fared none too well in the draw for post positions. The favorite drew No. 14 and will need to show plenty of early foot to gain a contending position before the field finishes the quarter-mile run down the stretch to the first turn. Pole position was drawn by Banister, one of the E. R. Bradley pair, with William Woodward's Merry Pete and Maj. Austin wouldn't let it go as 8 o'clock) the name of Dnieper, owned by Mrs. P. A. B. Widener, was dropped into the entry box. Then followed a slow, but steady stream of slips. When the box was opened, it was revealed that 17 colts and two fillies remain eligible for the classic.

No Absentees of Note.

There were no absentees of note. J. E. Widener's Brevity, the Bomar Stable's Grand Slam and Forest Play, the Belair Stud's Granville and Teufel, the Coldstream Stud's Coldstream, E. R. Bradley's Bien Joli and Banister, the Milky Farm's The Fighter and Sangreal, M. L. Schwartz's Bold Venture, Mrs. S. B. Mason's He Did, Maj. A. C. Taylor's Indian Broom, the Foxcatcher Farm's Gold Seeker and Mrs. B. Franzheim's Silas, a 100-to-1 shot, were safely within the fold, and had been respected.

Dnieper's entry was not entirely unexpected and he will run coupled with Brevity, the favorite. The Belair Stud, in addition to Granville and Teufel, came through with a surprise in Merry Pete, a maiden. Seventh Heaven, a filly owned by W. C. Goodloe and Holl Image, from the Superior Stable, came in as virtual strangers.

As is usual with Derbys, rumors flew thick and fast hereabouts today. One that had Brevity ailing was denied by his handlers, but those who saw Brevity in his final "blow out" this morning contend that he made a poor showing. The majority of clockers gave 0:53 3-5 as his time for a half-mile, but some had it as high as 0:54 1-5.

Teufel, Granville Also Liked.

While most of the odds makers were still holding Brevity as low as 6 to 5, as the afternoon wore on there were predictions that he would go to the post at as much as 5 to 2. The Florida Derby winner may have a rival for favoritism in the Belair Stud entry. The two major members, Teufel and Granville, are being held at 3 to 1.

Grand Slam, Indian Broom, Bold Venture, the Milky Way entry of The Fighter and Sangreal are rated in the second flight. It is believed that the others will range from 12 to 1 upward.

In the event of mud—the weather man has predicted showers—Grand Slam will move into second position, if not favoritism. He and Silas, a distinct outsider, are about the only tried mudders in the field, although Brevity and several others are believed to be at home in the tough going.

The track was slow when today's racing began and it was given a "good" rating as the program neared completion. If the rain should hold off, the Derby field will compete on a fast oval, it is predicted.

Nine Others Work Out.

In addition to Brevity, nine others of the Derby group were out on the track this morning. Granville and Merry Pete went a half mile easily in 0:51 2-5. Teufel was believed ready and only galloped. Indian Broom, holder of the world record for 1⅛ miles, stepped three-eighths in 0:36 3-5. Grand Slam took it easy in a jog of 1:19 for 6 furlongs. The Fighter and Sangreal worked five-eighths together in 1:01 3-5. The Bradleyites, Bien Joli and Banister, were only airing as they went five-eighths in 1:04.

While Matt Winn, the master of ceremonies here, forecast a crowd of 80,000, others qualified and less prejudiced, said 60,000 was a more likely figure. Some 25,000 saw today's program.

While the clubhouse here today was fairly overflowing with celebrities of all sorts, there was no more jittery person hereabouts than Joseph E. Widener. He hopes that Brevity will chase the jinx that has pestered him in past derbies. In 1927, his Osmand lost the coveted prize by a "snoot," in the race won by Cavalcade; his Peace Move was kicked while at the post and his Chance Sun, prominent in the winter books that year, went wrong and failed to start.

Widener is depending upon Wayne Wright to bring his colors home ahead. Wright has had exceptional success this year in big races. It was Wright who was credited with Top Row's much-discussed $100,000 Santa Anita victory. It was Wright who piloted Brevity to the Florida Derby triumph.

Kindacorn Wins as Chastity Is Disqualified in 8th at Pimlico

Foul Is First Of Season In State

Manager Bill Interfered With; Cachalot Is Awarded Place.

By the Associated Press.

Pimlico Race Track, Md. May 1. The first disqualification of the spring season in Maryland occurred in the seventh race here today when Mrs. T. Stevenson's Chastity, ridden by J. Hunter, finished second behind Kindacorn. There was a photo finish but after the picture revealed Kindacorn as the winner, and Chastity second, the latter's number was taken down. Cachalot, which ran third, then took the place with Manager Bill moving up from fourth to third. Chastity was disqualified for interfering with Manager Bill. Kindacorn paid $15.90 and the time for the mile and a sixteenth was 1:48.

The red, white and blue silks of Miss Ethel Hill were carried to victory by Deliberate in the Hilltop, 6-furlong feature of the program.

Well ridden by Carl Hanford, who incidentally scored his second straight win, Deliberate had all the speed and won by two lengths from Edward Bruner's Aneroid, with J. P. Jones' Deflate in the show hole.

About 7,000 racegoers turned out for the sport.

Hanford shot Deliberate into a commanding early lead and never left the result in doubt. In rounding the stretch turn it appeared as if Jockey Wagner, aboard Aneroid, would race up to even terms with the leader, but the Hill standard bearer withstood the challenge, and held his field safe through the stretch.

The winner paid $9.50 and the time for the 6 furlongs was 1:13 1-5.

There was hardly anything to the 2-mile steeplechase, second on the card, but R. H. Bain's Rock Lad. Displaying plenty of speed on the flat, the Ladkin gelding assumed the lead soon after the drop of the flag and led all the way. Rock Lad beat G. H. Bostwick's Ember Gleam by five lengths, while the latter nosed out Greatorex. Twelve started and there were no spills. The time was 3:49 4-5 and the mutuel payoff $4.90.

Zinkievich's Hit Wins in Overtime

Adam Zinkievich, Devitt Prep's irrepressible athlete, hit a home run in the ninth inning yesterday with two men on base to give his team a 12-11 victory over Roosevelt High.

Using his second team at intervals, Coach Herman Littman, of Roosevelt, saw his club gradually overhauled in the late innings, despite use of his first stringers. Zinkievich's homer climaxed an eight-run rally for Devitt in the eighth and ninth innings.

SWIFT PLY, away well, sprinted into a clear lead at once, saved ground on the rail throughout and was kept under mild pressure to the finish. REGAL LILY, in a contending position from the start, disposed of CARE FOR in the stretch and just lasted to stall off DROWSY. The latter gradually bettered her position, secured racing room on the inside entering the stretch and closed stoutly. CARE FOR, forced the early pace, but weakened at the end. TORIANNA, away well, could not keep up. TRUE TUNE raced wide all the way after breaking slowly. GENIAL MANNERS went evenly. TIDY LADY could not improve her position. The others were outrun.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROCKLAD, $4.90, $4.10, $3.70; EMBER GLEAM (entry), $14.50, $6.00; GREATOREX, $9.90.

ROCK LAD had speed to take command from the start, was rated in front throughout and was easily best. He swerved badly when taking several of the fences. EMBER GLEAM, always in a contending position, closed stoutly and just got up to beat GREATOREX. The latter raced in closest attendance to the leader until the finish, made several futile attempts to reach the leader, but was tiring at end. REIGH STONE, restrained from the pace of the early leaders, responded well to make up some ground in the last half-mile. DOCK LIGHT, slow to begin, moved up after a turn of the field, but could not better his position thereafter. HOW DIVINE raced forwardly for one mile and then fell back steadily. DUNDRILLIN raced in spots. SYRIAC and STAR TRAP stopped.

THIRD RACE—Mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800. Claiming. The Home Talent. Foaled in Maryland. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:21. Off at 3:27. ANNIMESSIC, sluggish in the early stages, moved into a contending position when settled in his stride, came around the leaders in the stretch and just got up. BUDDY BOO, away slowly, quickly moved into contention, closed gamely and just failed to get up. JUSTA GLIDER had early spee dto force the pace, moved into a short lead in the stretch and hung on gamely. DOCTOR'S GIFT, always a forward factor, closed with good speed. BUNGALOW closed some ground. WESTERN RUN had good early speed, but stopped. TIGHT WAD could never get up. OUR SHIP had no speed. CANPRA raced in dull fashion.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900. Claiming. The Gunpowder. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:56. Off at 3:58½. Winner, R. Pending's dk. f. DISTRACTING, slow to show her best speed, moved up stoutly on the turn, came to the outside of the leaders through the stretch and drew away under pressure. FERVID, rated off the early pace, moved up fast through the stretch, but was not good enough. CHILIAD had speed to set a good pace into the stretch, but weakened in the final sixteenth. SASSAFRAS, slow as usual in the early stages, closed a good gap. ROCK RIM stopped after having nice early speed. BLACK GIRL could not keep up. SHEPHERD BOY could not enter contention. MAD EAGLE quit, as did DOESKIN.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900. Claiming. The Catonsville. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:26. Off at 4:30. Winner, F. J. Buchanan's b. g. SAND CLOUD, slow to find his stride and badly outpaced for the first half-mile, swung to the outside when rallying, closed determinedly after reaching the home-stretch and wore APPREHEND down to get up in the last few strides. APPREHEND raced FLOSILDA and GOLD CLIP into submission in the first five furlongs, sprinted into a head midway of the homestretch, but flattened out badly under his weight in the closing furlong while under severe punishment. FLOSILDA showed good speed to hold a forward position and continued courageously in the late stages. NARISE could not improve her position at any stage. CARELESS KNIGHT was unable to better her position under stout urging. MOUNT AUBURN passed tiring horses. STAR QUEEN raced in spots and went wide in the late stages. GOLD CLIP stopped badly after a half-mile.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward; allowance. Start good. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:45. Off at 5:01½. Winner, Miss Ethel Hill's b. f. DELIBERATE had nice speed to take command immediately after the start, drew into a commanding position and was easily held. ANEROID ran. The latter gradually bettered his position, made repeated efforts to reach the winner, but was not good enough. DEFLATE raced evenly and had no excuses. ALFRED THE GREAT, very sluggish in the early running, trailed far back, but closed a good gap through the final quarter. PRINCE TURLEY flashed early speed, but stopped badly. WINTER SPORT could never reach a contending position. SCUDDER quit.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $900. Claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Went to post at 5:27. Off at 5:28. Winner, A. Papa's b. m. (6), by Prince of Bourbon—Mercia. Trained by D. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KINDACORN, $15.90, $5.50, $3.80; CACHALOT, $4.00, $2.60; MANAGER BILL, $3.20.

KINDACORN, rated off the early pace, secured racing room on the inside entering the stretch, wore down MANAGER BILL in the final stride. CHASTITY had good speed to race lapped on the outside of MANAGER BILL, disposed of the latter to take a short lead in the stretch, came over sharply on MANAGER BILL in the stretch and continued gamely, but just failed to last. She was disqualified for the foul. CACHALOT was reserved off the early pace, moved to the leaders through the stretch, came to the outside and closed very fast. MANAGER BILL had nice early speed while racing with CHASTITY in the lead, continued gamely into the stretch, but was bothered when CHASTITY came over on him sharply. MAR PAL raced in spots. HOOPS was always outrun.

EIGHTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $900. Claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:45. Off at 5:57. Winner, Robert M. Rook. Two-dollar mutuels paid—APATHY, $9.00, $4.50, $3.90; TACK, $7.90, $5.50; WICKLIFFE, $13.30.

APATHY, nicely handled, was taken under restraint after outrunning her field to the first turn, rallied gamely when shaken up entering the homestretch and, holding on stoutly under a hard ride, outstayed TACK nearing the finish. TACK, close to the winner from the beginning, made repeated efforts in the last half-mile, but faltered under punishment in the last furlong. WICKLIFFE, prominent throughout, held on determinedly when the real issue came. INFILEE finished with good courage, although unable to gain on the leaders at the close. POST BRIGADE, steered very wide after being slow to settle in his stride, closed a good gap.

Mt. Rainier Nine Bows To Beltsville CCC, 8-3

Mount Rainier High School lost to the Beltsville CCC nine yesterday on the latter's field, 8 to 3. The Mounts could not find a pitcher to hold the hard-hitting Government boys.

Gerald Barrick, the CCC hurler, only allowed the boys from the District line 5 hits while his mates were piling up a total of 12. The game was marred by loose fielding plays on both sides.

Maryland Holds Field Day, High School Track Meet Today

Four Varsity Contests on Program

Lacrosse, Baseball and Tennis on Card for Feature Day.

10 a. m.—Tennis, Maryland Jayvees vs. Tech.
12:30 p. m.—Start of interscholastic meet.
1 p. m.—Varsity tennis, Maryland vs. Catholic U.
1 p. m.—Varsity meet, Maryland vs. Richmond, to be run jointly with interscholastics.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The University of Maryland's spring sports program reaches its peak today at College Park, where Old Line varsity and freshmen teams, augmented by approximately 500 schoolboy athletes, will stage a three-ring circus billed as the annual field day.

Briefly, the schedule includes tennis, lacrosse, baseball and track, and any one of the four varsity contests in these sports would be an attractive main event in itself. The program opens at 10:30 a. m., when Tech High School's net team meets the Terrapin yearlings.

Georgetown's potent diamond aggregation will seek its second victory over Maryland this year in the baseball game, which will get under way promptly at 2 o'clock, Robust Nick Nicketakis, the Hilltoppers' star southpaw, who made Maryland say "Uncle" last week, will hurl for the Hoyas. He probably will be opposed by Lanky Vic Willis or George Wood.

A close and exciting meet is expected between the Maryland and Richmond track teams, as both institutions boast capable runners. The feature probably will be supplied by Coleman Headley, Old Line middle distance runner who lowered the school stadium mile and half-mile records last week against Virginia, and Bill Lumpkin, of Richmond. Lumpkin has pointed for this meeting with Headley since the start of the season.

In lacrosse Coach Jack Faber's ten meets up with the Mount Washington team in a match that may decide the 1936 national championship. Comprised wholly of former college stars, many of them all-Americans while in school, Mount Washington will place a team on the field that is rated without peer in the East. This, the closing number of the program, is scheduled for 4 o'clock.

Catholic University's tennis team meets the Terarpin racqueters at 1 o'clock in the varsity net event. The track meet will be run concurrently with the scholastic meet and will start promptly at 12:30 o'clock.

60,000 May See Kentucky Derby

Taylor's Far Western speedster, Indian Broom, next.

If, as now seems probable, the Downs track is heavy and several seconds slow, the chances of Grand Slam, pride of the Detroit delegation, certainly will be much improved. Under such conditions, a good proportion of the experts expects Grand Slam to outrun Brevity, or any other rival, in the stretch. Others besides Grand Slam whose records or breeding indicate they can travel in heavy footing include Morton L. Schwartz's Bold Venture, which has picked up much support this week; Indian Broom, which set a world mark of 1:47 3-5 for one mile and an eighth this spring; Mrs. Silas Mason's He Did, winner of the Santa Anita Derby, and the filly, Gold Seeker, which worked impressively on a heavy track yesterday. Sangreal, to be ridden by Mack Garner, also likes mud.

Bradley's Banister, the Bomar Stable's Forest Play and Mrs. Mars' The Fighter, winner of the Texas Derby, and Seventh Heaven, all are rated doubtful starters if the going is too heavy.

Blair's Errors Help Wilson Win, 9 to 3

Losers Make 9 Miscues, Leave 15 Men Stranded on Bases.

Taking advantage of a lot of slipshod ball playing on the part of Montgomery Blair High, Woodrow Wilson High won its second victory of the season yesterday, defeating the hosts, 9 to 3, with a late rolly, at Silver Spring.

The losers betrayed Jack Golden on the mound with nine errors, four of them on the part of Wilmeth at short, and left 15 men on the basas for something of a scholastic record. The Wilsonites were off to an early lead and sewed up the ball game in the seventh inning with 4 runs.

Stevens hit a long home run out of the park in the fifth to break a 2-all tie. Mike Godfrey led the losers with four hits, but hit into a double play with the bases loaded in the eighth inning.

Dunnington, with four hits, including three rousing doubles, led the Wilson batters and tied Godfrey for stick honors.

Celtics Seek Eighth Victory Tomorrow

Alexandria, Va., May 1.—St. Mary's Celtics will be gunning for their eighth consecutive victory of the season, when they play host to the Rockville, Md., team Sunday afternoon at Baggett's Stadium. The game will start at 3 p. m.

Jimmy Titcomb will pitch for the Celtics, without a doubt, as he is the only first-class hurler available for the team. Art Lacey, who has won four of the Celtics victories, and who is considered the ace of the staff has reported to Harrisburg, Pa., to pitch in the New York-Pennsylvania League. Joe Garvey, who was also being counted on to win a good number of games for the locals this season, took a run-out powder on the Celtics.

Miller and Sarron Bear Down In Final Training Stretch

By Bill McCormick.

Champion Freddie Miller and Pete Sarron, the fighting little man who will attempt to wrest the featherweight crown from him at Griffith Stadium May 11, yesterday bore down as they neared the stretch of their strenuous training grinds.

Both showed form indicating they will be absolutely in the proverbial pink of condition for the 15-round title joust. Both were close to the weight limit of 126 pounds, indicating neither will have any difficulty with excess poundage.

Miller, taking his first public workout here, enjoyed three rounds of merry warfare with Jose Santos —and by merry war is meant merry war. Neither the champion nor his sparmate pulled any punches and both were rocked to the heels numerous times in furious exchanges that evoked gasps of awe from the goodly crowd assembled at the Humidor gymnasium.

Santos, working under orders to shoot the works and concentrate on a body attack, ripped savagely into Miller's midsection whenever possible. Most of the damage Sarron inflicted on Miller in a previous bout in Miami was done by body blows and Freddie is determined to not only work out a suitable defense for another such attack, but to prepare his tummy to weather the storm, if necessary.

Sarron boxed five rounds—two with Baby Manuel and three with Bobby Dean, both southpaws. After showing impressive form in the ring, Pete punched the light bag continuously for a full three minutes without missing it once. This feat is one of the greatest demonstrations of endurance and stamina any fighter ever showed.

Miller will continue to box today and Sunday, seeking to bring himself into his finest fighting fettle by ring time. Sarron will shadow box today, lay off Sunday and gradually taper off next week. It is his plan to achieve proper condition early, then rest a few days before the important fight.

Both Miller and Sarron will continue to work at the Humidor Gymnasium, 1121 Fourteenth street, the champion working at 2 p. m., Sarron at 1 p. m. The workouts are open to the public free of charge.

Rally in Ninth Wins, 7-6, for Central

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 1.—A ninth-inning rally gave Central High School, Washington, a 7-to-6 victory over Fredericksburg High here this afternoon after the latter had held a 2-run lead. The game turned into one of the toughest battles witnessed here this year, with both sides suffering numerous setbacks.

The finale was a nightmare to Heflin. With one down, he walked Valenza and Fones got on through an error. A Heflin fast one beaned Mallus, forcing him to leave the game. Moran got on through an error and by that time three runs had crossed the plate to put Central in the lead, 7 to 6.

Aggies Downed By D. C. Nine In 8-5 Tilt

The District Commissioners continued their impressive drive toward the championship of the United States Government League of The Washington Post Sandlot Association yesterday with an 8-to-5 victory over the previously undefeated Agriculture ball tossers. Four home runs were produced during the occasion.

The Commissioners got off to a three-run lead in the first inning on a pass to Clark, a single by Chilcott and a home run by Moore. Agriculture came back with a homer by Freeman in the same frame, but a single by Cliff Keyser and a four-base sock by Printz in the second inning gave the Commissioners a 5-to-1 lead.

In the third, Simonds walked Nelson sacrificed and James singled for another Commissioner run. A single by Smith, an error by Clark and a single by Freeman made it 6 to 2, but the Commissioners clung to their lead to the finish.

Capital League Opener Is Set For Today

Pepco-Chestnut Farms to Meet; 2 Bands to Play for Occasion.

Another of the big week-day leagues of The Washington Post Sandlot Association will open its season today when the National Capital League gets under way on the East Ellipse with Pepco Service Stations meeting Chestnut Farms Dairy.

Two bands will grace the occasion at 3:30, as Dr. William McClellan, president of Pepco, and A. H. Brawner, president of Chestnut Farms, throw out an opening ball apiece. The Boys Club band and Chestnut Farms band will furnish the martial strains.

The league recently completed all plans for a big season, electing William Montgomery, president of the Acacia Life Insurance Co., honorary president. Other officers elected included Vice President John Laycock, of Chestnut Farms, and S. L. Johnson, of Gulf Oil, secretary and treasurer.

President Montgomery will throw out the first ball when his Acacia team meets Center Market Monday, also on the East Ellipse. Peoples Drug Store and Chestnut Farms will also meet Monday, with Arch MacDonald, popular sports announcer, or Dr. William Gibbs, president of the Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., as the official first-ball thrower.

Arthur Thompson, president of Thompson's Dairy, will throw out the first ball Tuesday, when Thompson's Dairy plays Pepco, and R. D. Caves, president of Gulf Oil, will toss the honorary sphere, opening hostilities between the Gulfers and Washington Gas Light Co.

Stocks Decline In April After Year's Advance

Building Shares Lose Most and Food Group the Least.

New York, May 1.—After 12 successive monthly advances, the market appraisal of 100 representative common stocks turned definitely lower in April, according to the monthly compilation of Frazier Jelke & Co. Valuation of the stocks dropped $1,768,560,000 or 8.5 per cent in the month to $18,974,924,000 from $20,743,484,000 at the end of March.

The appreciation of the list in the year's rise amounted to 61 per cent, the market value having advanced $7,900,154,000 from $12,843,332,000 a year ago. The motor group recorded the sharpest increase, moving to $3,240,791,000 from $1,554,681,000 a year ago, an advance of 108 per cent. Utilities recovered 62 per cent in the year, rail shares 47 per cent, oils 31 per cent and miscellaneous industrials 3 per cent.

All the separate classifications sustained losses in the last month, the widest decline on a percentage basis having occurred in building stocks, which lost 13.7 per cent. Steels dropped 12.8 per cent and oils lost 11.2 per cent, while rail equipments dropped 10 per cent. The smallest decline was in the food shares, which were only 2.1 per cent lower in the month. Merchandising issues dropped only 4.2 per cent.

Flood Havoc Cuts Railroad Profits

New York, May 1 (AP).—The cost of flood rehabilitation in the East and snow removal in the Northwest during March was reflected in a reduced net operation income for railroads, totals compiled today showed.

Based upon the returns of the first 67 reporting lines, gross revenue in March was 11 per cent higher than the March (1935) total, but the net operating income gained only 1.9 per cent over the corresponding period a year before.

For the first three months of this year, however, gross was 13.3 per cent over a year ago and net from operations was 29.3 per cent higher.

Largest advances during March were established by the Southwestern roads such as Southern Pacific, Missouri-Kansas-Texas, Missouri Pacific and the St. Louis-San Francisco.

Roads showing the widest improvement during the quarter practically all operate in the Mississippi valley. They include the Santa Fe, St. Paul, Southern Railway, Burlington, Southern Pacific, Missouri Pacific, and the St. Louis-San Francisco.

The larger losses were confined to carriers in industrial territory such as the Baltimore & Ohio, the Chicago & Northwestern, and the New Haven.

Tax Penalty Falls on Small Corporations

They Distribute Less Out of Earnings, Harvard Professor Says.

New York, May 1.—The proposed corporation earnings tax will fall more heavily on smaller corporations and will penalize certain industries to the advantage of others, according to an analysis of the new program by Prof. W. L. Crum, of Harvard University, in the Annalist.

In 1931, 1932 and 1933, according to a table presented by Prof. Crum, the larger corporations paid out in dividends a greater share of their earnings than the smaller corporations, the largest corporations paying out 95, 98 and 91 per cent of their total earnings in the three years, respectively. "No kind of taxation penalty upon undistributed surplus could have forced any significant rise in the share of earnings distributed as dividends by the giant companies.

A uniform tax rate applied to undistributed current earnings would take in taxes a larger share of the earnings of small corporations than of large. The case is even worse on the basis of the tax proposals; instead of uniform rates applied to all retained earnings, the proposed scheme applies rates graduated according to the share of earnings retained (i. e., inversely according to the share paid out as dividends). This plan would place an even heavier tax burden on the smaller corporation.

"Although the factors at work are too numerous and complicated to warrant sure conclusions," says Prof. Crum, "we may fairly infer that this unequal burden would foster monopoly. Either the small concern would be under the handicap of excessive taxation, or its capacity for insuring itself against depression would be damaged through excessive dividend disbursements."

Short Maine Crop Boosts Potato Price

Boston, May 1 (AP).—A short crop of Maine potatoes this year has boosted the price $2.85 a barrel above last year's figure, Andrew J. Beck, president of the Arcostook Council, said today. Explaining there were 100,000 carloads dumped a year ago, Beck said already this season 38,000 carloads had been shipped and there were only about 4,000 more carloads to go before the entire crop was disposed of.

Last year, he said, 54,000 carloads were shipped. The price was 15 cents a barrel. This year's short crop, brought about by weather conditions, is bringing $3 a barrel at present and the price may go higher.

Surplus Freight Cars Decrease by 2,947

Class I railroads on April 14 had 202,158 surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday.

This was a decrease of 2,947 cars compared with the number on March 31.

Stocks Slowly Pull Ahead After Early Irregularity in Diminished Trading.

New York, May 1.—Stocks held their gains of the previous day, after early hesitation, but aside from a few dashing issues no great additions to prices were made. The tone was firm most of the time and the day was appreciated as an extension of the breathing spell and an opportunity to make a fresh survey of the terrain. Bonds also improved in slow trading, but Treasury issues weakened. Grains declined. September wheat sold seven-eighth of a cent lower at 84¾ cents a bushel.

Opening prices in stocks were irregular but some of the leading issues were harder. For the first time in a week the market missed its noon-hour selling, and prices gradually stiffened in the afternoon after a dull morning. Trading volume showed little inclination to increase, but that did not seem to discourage anyone, as it indicated the drying up of liquidation, if nothing else. The short interest has not been heavy enough to suggest any sustained covering movement on heavy volume. If stocks were not weak, neither were they buoyant. Turnover in stocks was lower at around 1,250,000 shares.

May Day demonstrations of radicals in Europe had no upsetting effect on the foreign exchanges, although French francs were down a trifle. Sterling was firm. A further export of gold from Paris is expected. This week's Federal Reserve System statement shows an increase of $12,000,000 in the monetary gold stock and a large increase in excess bank reserves.

Disbursement of approximately $90,000,000 in dividends and $30,000,000 in interest on corporation stocks and bonds was without effect on the money market, nor did the shifting of loans in connection with the changed rules for brokers have much to do with rates. Just the same, the stronger position for bargaining in which the new regulations place the banks is expected to bring higher call and time money rates shortly.

Billions and Billions.

It is only a matter of a few steps and a few seconds by telephone from the Treasury Building, where sits amid saluting guards the Secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morgenthau, and the White House offices, occupied by the smiling President, Franklin Roosevelt. Yet the gulf between the two buildings seems to be a wide one, or the usual communications services have broken down, or the Secretary yesterday had not yet read President Roosevelt's Jefferson Day speech in New York, made last Saturday night, or he was determined to tell his own story and stick to it.

President Roosevelt, referring to criticism of his wasteful spending policy, said: "I tell them that whereas the deficit of the Federal Government this year is about $3,000,000,000," and so on. Could it have been that the President lost a mere $3,000,000,000 or so of deficit when he took his notes out of his pocket the other night? Surely he wasn't intentionally trying to mislead his friends by understatement. Whatever caused the slip-up, Secretary Morgenthau spilled the beans yesterday when he told the Senate committee that the deficit this year would be two times $3,000,000,000, or, according to his figures, $6,000,000,000.

Brokers' Loans.

The rise of $20,000,000 in brokers' loans for the week ended Wednesday, reported last night by the Federal Reserve Board, was small for two reasons. One was that the sharp decline in stock prices had reduced borrowings and held down the expansion that took place through overborrowings by brokers to anticipate the stiffer collateral requirements that went into effect today. The other was that some of the last minute borrowing on the old basis came too late to appear in this week's report. At any rate the rise makes it clear that a great deal of borrowing was resorted to by brokers who wished to come under the wire on the shorter course.

Records.

From today banks began to keep permanent records of brokers' loan envelopes—something which they had not had to do before. In some banks photostat records were arranged for; in others duplicate envelopes were made. At some future time the Federal Reserve banks may require for the Federal Reserve Board information as to what was lent to an individual firm and on what security on a given date, together with the valuation of the security at the time. Until today when a broker paid off his borrowing he got his envelope with all the notations on it, leaving the bank merely with the record that it had lent a certain amount of money to a certain firm on certain dates. Under the New Deal's elaborate statistical system more records than those are required and, the law being what it is, a bank cannot refuse or neglect to keep what is required.

Curb Industrials Rally at Close

New York, May 1 (AP).—Curb market stocks held to a fairly steady course today with considerable help from industrial specialties which rallied in the final hour after acting indifferently most of the day.

Pittsburgh Plate Glass came through with a 4-point net gain on small sales in the last hour. Gulf Oil went from 83 to 85½ before settling back to close at 85 for a net gain of 2½ points, and gains of major fractions to more than a point were registered by American Gas, Great Atlantic & Pacific, Lake Shore Mines, Newmont and Pan-American Airways.

Scattered issues lagged behind throughout the day. Among these were Electric Bond & Share, International Petroleum Aluminum Co., and Sherwin-Williams. Transfers of 268,000 shares compared with 476,000 the day before.

Chicago, May 1 (AP).—Pronounced weakness developed in wheat today largely owing to an authoritative unofficial estimate the new domestic winter crop would much exceed the latest Government forecast.

The estimate, which was included in the first of the May monthly crop reports issued by leading private statisticians, figured the country's 1936 total winter wheat yield at 522,352,000 bushels, against 493,000,000, the official prediction a month ago.

Wheat closed weak, ¾ to 1⅜ under yesterday's finish, May 97⅞ to 98, July 86¾ to 86⅞; corn ¼ to ⅝ down; May, 63⅛; oats, ⅛ to ½ up; and provisions, varying from 5 cents decline to a rise of 22 cents.

On The Air Today

The newspaper clan gathered yesterday noon to say goodbye to Tito Guizar and his charming wife, Carmen. It was one of those things—genuine regret on one hand at Tito's departure and the spirit of hilarity on the other, for the great Mexican tenor is leaving for what promises to be his greenest and most fertile fields.

After his final broadcast at WRC last night, Tito went into New York for a brief stay. Then he goes to Mexico for a three-weeks vacation. After that, back to New York long enough to give the description in Spanish of the Louis-Schmeling fight from ringside for NBC, and thence to the West Coast, where he will make a picture.

And that is quite an active program. In addition to these activities, Tito is to begin a new network series early in the summer. It may be on the Mutual net, or again for NBC.

The picture probably will be a version of "Manon" or "La Traviata"—for M. G. M. No definite arrangements have been completed, but Gladys Swarthout has been hinted as the most likely feminine star. Pictures, incidentally, are no new venture for Tito Guizar. He already is well known to Hollywood, where he has made flickers in Spanish for distribution in Central and South America.

This WRC engagement has been doubly profitable. For it has permitted this handsome son of Mexico to spend many hours in an intensive study of English. After all he has been in the States only a few years.

I hope you'll be on the lookout for Tito when he returns to the air in the summer. And gather up the family and see his first American picture when it comes to town. I hope so, because Tito Guizar is real, sincere, unaffected; an artist and a grand guy.

The Kentucky Derby, one of the major sports events of the world's calendar, will be aired exclusively by C. B. S. today (locally, WJSV, at 5:15). Again this year Bryan Field, Bob Trout and Hugh Conrad will provide the description of the race and all its colorful background.

* * * *

Tonight Freddie Rich and his orchestra begin a new series of "Your Hit Parade" programs, WJSV, at 9. The vocalists will be Buddy Clark and Margaret McCrae. But don't let that name McCrae fool you. You will remember her as Margaret McCravy, who did considerable vocalizing from WJSV a few months ago. Margaret made about as favorable an impression on local studio executives as any artist could—but no one seemed to put her to work commercially. So she went to New York and was selected from an enormous field of applicants for this new network of importance. I guess it merely proves that the fellow who cries "There isn't any talent in Washington!" just don't know it when he hears it. Perhaps we drive good talent to New York. J. H. H.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

London May 1.—Yesterday's recovery in the New York Stock Exchange, covering over the week-end helped steady prices in the stock market here today. Week-end settlements restricted business somewhat although investment issues, oils and mining shares held their early gains. Industrials and transatlantic issues eased and the market closed irregular.

Paris.—Nervousness over the prospects of a "leftist" victory in the election runoffs next Sunday caused prices to react during the early trading. Prices turned upward later on renewed buying and the market closed firm.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures closed lower on easier North American markets and bearish American crop estimates. Cotton futures closed 5 to 6 points higher on trade calling in from months and Bombay buying of later deliveries.

26,000 Flood-Stranded Fish Are Returned to the Potomac

Hagerstown Volunteers Move Marooned Bass and Others From Rapidly Drying Pools Back to the River.

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., May 1.—District Deputy Game Warden Albert Crampton has just finished saving 26,000 fish from the flood.

The thousands of bass and other fish are marooned in the old C. & O. Canal bed, near the Potomac River, by flood waters of March. Rapidly rising waters swept the fish far inland.

When the flood began receding the fish came along too until they reached the deep bed of the canal. Finding holes there, they stopped over and did not reach the Potomac again.

Their situation was all right until the canal began drying up. Crampton, a veteran at such work, organized non-paid groups to rescue the fish and transfer them to the Potomac.

The volunteers used nets to trap many of the fish. In other instances, short ditches were dug to the river, allowing the bass to reach running water again.

Conservation commission officials said the fish would have died because of low water or would have been easy prey for birds and animals due to low water.

The crews of workmen were given carp and other fish the conservation commission was not interested in saving. Other than that, they received no pay.

Fishing is now allowed in the canal. The commission has agreements under which it is allowed to transfer fish from it to other waters.

Culbertson on Bridge

A Safe Grand Slam.

Enthusiastic letters continue to pour in, praising the efficiency of the new asking bids. As certain as I was that these conventional bids would raise slam bidding to a science, it is gratifying to find that the contract playing world indorses my belief.

I am indebted to Messrs. George and Sascher Hourwitz of New York for submitting a hand they found ideal for the use of asking bids.

South, dealer.

NORTH

♦ 10 4 2
♣ J 10 9 5 4

SOUTH
♠ A J 9 7 2
♦ K 7
♣ A 8 6

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 spades	Pass	5 dimds.	Pass
5 no trp.	Pass	7 spades	[final bid]

The difficulty of safely reaching the grand slam without the use of asking bids is apparent, since the key card of the hand—the diamond king—cannot otherwise be located. Even the employment of the 4-5 no trump convention is futile—that one vital card still will be a source of wory to North, and unbiddable by South, who has too close to a minimum to take aggressive action. From North's viewpoint South's opening bid easily could have been based on the spade ace or ace-jack, the king-queen of hearts, and the ace of clubs, with two or more small diamonds.

In that event a diamond finesses would be necessary for the grand slam—a bag gamble considering that a certain small slam would have to be jeopardized. Of course, if South had held the heart king instead of the diamond king or a singleton diamond, he would have had to sign off with five spades, and North then would have been contented with a small slam.

TODAY'S QUESTION.

Question: The opening bidder said: "I bid one spade . . . I mean, one heart." Is there a penalty for this change of bid?

Answer: A player may correct a misnomer (slip of the tongue) without penalty, but this privilege may not be used to cover the correction of a mistake or a change of mind in making a call. Any question which arises as to whether a call ranks as a misnomer depends upon the facts of the particular case, and should be decided at the time by the other players.
